Lone Hand Policy Of Britain on Italy Protested by Paris

Cites A Possibility Of Quitting League

Step Taken After Duce Offers Aid, Demands Geneva Lift Bans.

As Italian troops occupied Dessye, Ethiopian Emperor Selassie's field quarters, in their march toward Addis Ababa, Rome reported Premier Mussolini had instructed his envoy to the Committee of Thirteen's session today at Geneva to demand that the League lift its sanctions against Italy before peace in Africa is discussed.

France yesterday unofficially warned Great Britain not to "play a lone hand" against Italy, under threat of withdrawal of French support in event of an attack in the Mediterranean.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 15.—France warned Great Britain tonight not to play a "lone hand against Italy" under penalty of withdrawing French support to the British fleet in event of an attack in the Mediterranean.

The French caution to England came on the heels of an Italian warning to France that the Fascist nation refuses to allow its military campaign against Ethiopia to be "frustrated."

The Italian declaration, which diplomatic sources reported was made by Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti to French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, was accompanied by a demand for French support in lifting war sanctions against Italy and a Fascist offer to stand with France against Germany in Locarno Treaty negotiations.

In the midst of the international complications, Premier Albert Sarraut told provincial newspaper editors France may be forced to quit the League of Nations if Geneva fails to affirm "faith in collective security" during "the most dreadful crisis for peace in 20 years."

Attacks Army Report.

The premier asserted the government could have used its army against Germany after the Reich denounced the Locarno Treaty by reoccupying the Rhineland.

"There has been a lot of talk recently about the inferiority of France's military machine as compared to that of Germany," he declared. "Nothing is more false."

The official French attitude on British foreign policy was disclosed first in the newspaper Le Temps and was confirmed later in official quarters.

"Our agreement to aid the British fleet if it is attacked in the Mediterranean does not hold if England plays a lone hand against Italy," Le Temps said.

"Britain has imperious reasons not to desire a war whose whole weight she would have to support alone and which, by force of things, would paralyze her action in Europe when, because of the violation of the Rhineland pact by Germany, the worst complications are to be feared on the continent."

Emphasize French Aid.

Confirming the statements, officials were careful to emphasize that French assistance to the British fleet would be forthcoming in case England's warships were attacked in carrying out decisions of the League.

(The government, under the leadership of former Premier Pierre Laval, agreed to aid the British in the Mediterranean during negotiations near the start of the Black Shirt campaign against Emperor Haile Selassie's kingdom.

(The French, however, then qualified their support on British recognition of the League decisions in view of England's vested interests in the Lake Tana region of Ethiopia and Egypt.

(The present British attitude would ask for more sanctions against Italy if Geneva conciliation measures fail. France, to the contrary, desires the existing war pen-

Italians Occupy Dessye in Drive On Addis Ababa

Push Expected to Start When Graziani Protects Badoglio's Flank.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Italian Field Headquarters, Northern Ethiopia, April 15.—Paving the way for a final offensive against Addis Ababa, Italian troops today occupied Dessye, Emperor Haile Selassie's field headquarters, and hoisted the tricolor of Italy over the gebbi, or ducal palace.

Occupation of Dessye revived indications that Marshal Pietro Badoglio, supreme commander in East Africa, will smash his way through to Haile Selassie's capital as soon as Gen. Rodolpho Graziani, commanding Italian troops on the southern front, protects the northern army's flank.

Graziani is poised ready to attack the armies of the Dedjazmach Nasibu, governor of Harrar Province. Capture of Harrar, Jijiga and Diredawa, remaining Ethiopian strongholds, would put Graziani in a position to protect Badoglio's flank during the march on Addis Ababa.

Military experts now believe Badoglio will base several squadrons of airplanes at Dessye preparatory to the push on Addis Ababa.

Throughout last night Italian troops circled Dessye. They entered the city at dawn and hoisted their flag over the palace the Emperor used as his general headquarters until he was forced to evacuate.

A native army corps was the first to enter Dessye. It captured the city without resistance.

The bloodless capture of Dessye, commercial capital of northern Ethiopia, definitely puts the Italians on the last stepping stone for the advance on Ethiopia's capital and completes the marathon-like march which began after the battle of Lake Ashangi.

Badoglio's forces now are 400 kilometers from the former Eritrean frontier. They have fought two-thirds of the way to Addis Ababa.

Italian forces from Gondar, Sokota and Sardo are expected to join the Dessye units shortly, giving Badoglio a formidable army for the offensive against Addis Ababa.

Hawaiian Clipper Lifts 26 Tons for U.S. Record

Alameda, Calif., April 15 (AP).—The Hawaiian Clipper, latest to join the fleet of transpacific planes, today lifted 26 tons gross weight after a 63-second run, which Pan-American officials said was an American record.

With Capt. Edwin C. Musick in command, the new clipper took off with its huge weight in almost a dead calm.

Sugar Firm Biggest AAA Beneficiary

U.S. Corporation Linked With Celotex, Also Given Checks.

By Sidney Olson.

The largest AAA benefit checks, totaling $1,067,665 in three checks for 1933 and 1934, went to the United States Sugar Corporation of New York, operating in Florida, for not growing sugar cane, The Post learned last night.

The primary business of the United States Sugar Corporation, according to informed sources, is the manufacture of wallboard of processed sugar-cane stalks, and its sugar production, although large, is incidental.

These sugar payments were not re-distributed, but became the property of the company. However, the company contracted under the AAA to pay wages established by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and to maintain standards as to labor conditions and child labor.

The United States Sugar Corporation has an interlocking directorate with the Celotex company, of Chicago and Louisiana, which also controls large sugar-cane properties in Louisiana and Florida, and which also received large AAA benefit payments, although the amount of the latter's checks could not be learned last night.

Produce Bagasse.

These companies grow cane primarily for the production of bagasse, a compound from which building materials, such as wallboard and many other industrial materials are made. However, the production of sugar forms a necessarily large and lucrative portion of their business.

About 3,000 laborers are employed on the United States Sugar Corporation's more than 100,000 acres of Everglades muck soil on the southern shore of Lake Okeechobee, where there are two sugar factories, one at Canal Point and one at Clewiston.

Officers of the United States Sugar Co. include Clarence R. Bitting, of Watch Hill, R. I., president; James J. Harrington, Clewiston, Fla., vice president and general manager; Harry S. Covington, New York City, vice president; William T. Bitting, Philadelphia, secretary; James F. Terrill, New York City, assistant secretary and treasurer; Jay W. Moran, of Clewiston, treasurer and assistant secretary.

Clarence Bitting and Harry Covington are chairman and vice chairman of the finance committee and members of the board of directors of the Celotex Co., which went into receivership in 1932.

B. G. Dahlberg, president of the Celotex Co., is also president of the South Coast Co., operating three sugar mills in Louisiana. This company also participated in AAA benefits largely, although the amounts are not known. In 1930 it went into receivership, with Dahlberg's brother, C. F. Dahlberg, appointed as one receiver and Jules Godchaux, of New Orleans, as another.

Officer in Another.

The latter is vice president in charge of operations of Godchaux Sugars, Inc., one of the Nation's biggest sugar producers, operating in every phase of the industry, with 1,400 employes, 55,000 acres of land in Louisiana, including 65 miles of railroad track with complete equipment, the latter including 16 locomotives and 790 cane cars.

This plantation was also a large AAA participant.

In the meantime, further check of available records showed that the 10 largest co-operating sugar producers in Puerto Rico, according to their allotments under the Puerto Rico sugar quota set by Secretary Wallace, showed these participants in order of size of production in 1934:

Central Aguirre Sugar Co.	94,124

Arrested Here

PAUL ALEXANDER.

$590,000 Bond Theft Laid to 8 Seized by U. S.

One Suspect Caught Here; Another Is Wanted in Riggs Bank Holdup.

Arrest of eight men and recovery of $310,000 in bonds, described as part of $590,000 in bonds stolen from the United States Trust Co., at New York, on December 13, 1934, was announced last night by the Department of Justice.

One of the men, Paul Alexander, was arrested here a few days ago, and another, William R. Evans, alias Fred Carr, is wanted in Washington in connection with the theft of $15,000 in bonds from the Riggs National Bank in 1929, it was learned from Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives.

Inspector Thompson, informed that Evans was being held in New York, said that the local authorities hold his indictment in connection with the Riggs' larceny and that he would have a detainer placed against Evans at New York.

The others held in the New York robbery as named by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, are Charles Hartman, Theodore Crowley, Gabriel Marosi and Earl F. Palmer, all of New York, and Rocco J. DeGrassi and George DeGrassi, both of West Palm Beach, Fla.

5 Have Crime Records.

Hoover said that legal proceedings would be instituted against the eight men in custody. Department of Justice records showed criminal records for five; Marosi, Palmer and Alexander did not have criminal records.

The bonds disappeared from the United States Trust Co. after being placed on the edge of one of the desks in the security cage two feet from a window while a clerk left for a few minutes. When he returned the bonds were gone.

A $100,000 bond, Hoover said, was found in the possession of Charles Hartman, at New York, who was described as "one of the shrewdest sneak thieves in the country, well known as one dealing in stolen securities, but, like other individuals of this type, he had the customary business 'front,' his being a barber shop in New York."

Bond Found in Bean Jar.

Another bond of the same denomination was found in a glass tube hidden in a jar of beans in the kitchen of the DeGrassi home at West Palm Beach, Hoover said. A $10,000 bond was found in the lining of a straw hat worn by Melvin S. Smith, who was arrested at Topeka, Kans., on June 10, 1935. Smith, ninth person connected with the case, is awaiting trial on violation of the national stolen property act.

Smith was the first arrested. He was apprehended soon after the Department of Justice entered the case, on receipt of information that part of the securities had been transported out of New York—a Federal offense.

During the recent days of the investigation, Hoover said, it became obvious that Hartman controlled the remainder of the securities, but he did not indicate what clews resulted in the arrest of the DeGrassi pair in Florida, or what led to the arrest of Alexander here.

The DeGrassis have been removed to New York. Alexander, who is being held here, also will be removed there, Hoover said.

Hottest April Day In 6 Years Visits D. C.; Mercury 86

The impending "good old summer time" cast is sultry shadow over Washington yesterday, giving the District its warmest day in more than six months and the hottest April weather recorded here in six years.

But, after the temperature had soared to a sizzling maximum of 86 at 2:30 p. m., clouds scurried before the sun, and a thunderstorm rumbled between here and Quantico.

The mercury toppled to 70, and then, with the return of the sunshine, climbed to 71 at 6 p. m.

Last September 21 the temperature reached 89. Previous April high mark was 91 on April 11, 1930. The all-time April record in the District is 95, recorded on April 27, 1915.

The double cherry blossoms in East Potomac Park will be in full bloom Saturday and the display will last a week to ten days, David Saunders, National Capital Parks horticulturist, said yesterday.

The Weather Bureau predicted showers for this morning and falling temperatures this afternoon and evening.

Florida Canal And 'Quoddy Are Dropped

Flood Control Projects in Budget Will Be Under PWA.

President Roosevelt yesterday smilingly announced abandonment of two of his most criticized dreams—the harnessing of the forces of the moon at Passamaquoddy Bay, in Maine, to cost around $40,000,000, and the cutting of a ship canal across Florida, at a cost of about $150,000,000.

Casually, in response to a question at his press conference, the President indicated that Congressional disapproval of further appropriations for the two projects had shut the Treasury doors to further outlays.

He hinted, however, in qualification, that "modified" plans for both projects may be submitted to Congress later, and that work will continue until present funds are exhausted.

Flood Control Under PWA.

The President also explained that since flood-control work was proposed in his January budget estimates to be included in the regular annual public works program of $500,000,000, that the problem would likely be handled under public works programs.

He said he was not acquainted with any special flood-control appropriation bills on Capitol Hill.

He recalled his remarks of a year ago last January when he proposed as a regular function of the Government the annual expenditure of $500,000,000 in regular public works, for public buildings, highways, navigation, flood control, dams, etc.

He lightly criticized what he termed loose thinking and writing about PWA projects, calling particular attention to a newspaper story of yesterday which had interpreted a PWA statement as showing expenditures of PWA funds had totaled $741 per man employed.

Calls Statement Careless.

He said this was a careless statement, and pointed out that PWA allotments were only 30 per cent of PWA projects' total cost, while if the full 100 per cent of money spent on these projects were considered, a figure of $2,000 per man would be reached.

In this connection he reminded the reporters present of the difference between PWA and WPA projects, mentioning the obvious difference in cost-per-man in such a project as the Triborough Bridge in New York, as compared to building 100 rural schoolhouses, or 1,000 rural bridges over small streams.

Both the Passamaquoddy project and the Florida ship canal project were begun by executive order, and without congressional action. For Passamaquoddy, which was to have harnessed the power of the deep tides in Cobscook and Passamaquoddy Bays on the northern boundary of Maine, $10,000,000 of emergency relief funds were set aside of an estimated $36,000,000.

Only Cobscook Affected.

Only Cobscook Bay would have been affected, since Passamaquoddy Bay is in Canadian territory, and the Canadian government declined to participate in an international project, but the name Passamaquoddy project stuck to the scheme.

Despite intense Senate criticism of the project, and the recent refusal of both houses of Congress to appropriate further funds for the tidal power project, Army engineers have stuck stoutly to their estimates, stating that the project is entirely feasible, reasonably cheap, and constitutes a forward-looking project of vast possibilities, in visioning the day many years hence when the United States needs all its power. Proponents have further pointed out that since Maine relief workers must be employed somehow, this was a good device, and that deduction of the basic relief costs made the total project cost relatively small.

Opponents denounced the plan as impractical, unnecessary, and visionary, asking pointedly what Eastern Maine industries had power needs of the size contemplated.

Critics pointed to such difficulties as the fact that the moon and the tides work but 14 hours a day in the plan as now developed, leaving a 10-hour power gap when no power would be developed. To meet

Senate Funds to Fight Suits on Lobby Inquiry Balked in House Vote

Size of Ballot Surprise; Knox Lead Is 85,281; Horner Triumphs.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 15.—A tidal wave of ballots for President Franklin D. Roosevelt shared attention tonight with the victories of Col. Frank Knox and Gov. Henry Horner in yesterday's Illinois primary.

In 5,784 precincts out of the State's 7,426, the President polled a vote of 1,112,402 in the Democratic Presidential preference ballot on which he was unopposed. Cook County contributed 831,021. In 5,877 precincts, Col. Knox and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, his opponent for the Republican preferential vote, received a combined vote of 675,979, with their Cook County aggregate 363,974.

Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and foe of the New Deal, outpointed his personal friend, but primary combatant by 85,281 votes in 6,006 precincts. Knox had 390,772 votes to 305,491 for Borah.

Horner, by a great race down-State, rolled back the Democratic organization forces which polled a big metropolitan area lead for Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, his opponent for the Democratic Governorship nomination. His plurality mounted during the day toward a total his supporters asserted would surpass 100,000 and Bundesen conceded his renomination. With 6,205 precincts tabulated the vote was: Horner, 656,407; Bundesen, 600,105.

Republicans contended the big Democratic vote was due in large measure to the great interest in the Horner-Bundesen fight luring many Severe Blow Is Dealt to Committee as $10,000 Is Turned Down.

Rep. Snell Leader In Bitter Dispute

By Felix Bruner.

The House, after a bitter fight, yesterday refused by a vote of 153 to 137 to approve an appropriation to pay the legal expenses of the Senate lobby investigating committee in suits growing out of seizure of private telegrams.

Although the amount of the proposed appropriation was only $10,000, the action was a severe blow to the committee. Members of the Senate group had looked upon the House test as involving a vote of confidence.

Meanwhile, at a hearing, the committee revealed that the "grass roots" convention in Macon, Ga., January 29, held by the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, was financed in its entirety by John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman, and Pierre du Pont, of E. I. du Pont deNemours & Co. Each contributed $5,000 to finance the convention. Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, New Deal opponent, was an active figure in the convention.

The committee also drew from Vance Muse, manager of the Southern group, the admission that he was at least partly responsible for printing and distributing "white supremacy" literature, which contained, among other things, an attack upon Mrs. Roosevelt, picturing her with a Negro. This literature was distributed at the "grass roots" meeting.

Was Passed by Senate.

Chairman Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, head of the Lobby committee, asked for the $10,000 appropriation after suits had been filed by William Randolph Hearst, publisher, to restrain the use of his telegrams seized by the committee. The Senate had passed the appropriation resolution without a record vote. Legal fees were to go to Crampton Harris, of Birmingham, Ala., former law partner of Black, who has been retained by the committee. The Hearst suit is expected to be carried to the Supreme Court following the ruling of Chief Justice Wheat of the District Supreme Court that he had no jurisdiction.

The House fight was based largely on the fact that the law now provides that no more than $300 per month can be paid to any investigating committee employe. The committee still has authority to employ counsel on that basis.

But running through the whole argument was a spirit of resentment against activities of the committee. Several members of the House have felt the sting of its exposures, including six members who were revealed to have shared a house with a lobbyist, and numerous others who were shown to have attended parties given by lobbyists.

Fight Led By Snell.

The fight on the resolution was led by Representative Snell (Republican), New York, the minority leader. Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, which also is charged with investigating lobbying, attempted to amend the resolution to provide an appropriation of $10,000 to pay legal fees of his committee. He was unsuccessful.

A blistering attack on the Black committee was made by Representative Plumley (Republican), Vermont.

"The committee's action (in seizing telegrams) is not only indefensible, but reprehensible and despicable," Plumley said. "Its action was an unwarranted interference with, infringement and violation of personal liberty, freedom from action, and the inherent and inalienable right of personal security.

"The day will come when such wrongs so perpetrated by Congress under a claim of authority will become so serious and will so universally invade and transgress the rights of the citizen that he will be warranted and provoked to exercise the right of revolution as his only means of redress."

State's Highest Tribunal Holds 'Model' Legislation Is Constitutional.

By the United Press.

Albany, N. Y., April 15.—Validity of the New York State unemployment insurance law, model for other States in carrying out provisions of President Roosevelt's Nation-wide social security program, was upheld by New York's highest court today. The law taxes employers to provide "pools" from which the unemployed may draw benefits.

The court of appeals, by a 5-to-2 decision, held there was "nothing unreasonable or unconstitutional in the legislative act, which seeks to meet the evils and dangers of unemployment in the future by raising a fund through taxation of employers generally."

Chief Judge Frederick Crane wrote the prevailing opinion. Judge Irving Hubbs wrote the dissent. Judge John F. O'Brien, of New York City, concurred with Hubbs.

The law went into effect January 1. In 1936 employers of four or more persons must pay a tax of 1 per cent of the pay rolls of those employes receiving less than $2,500 annually. In 1937, the rate is raised to 2 per cent and in 1938 to 3 per cent. Drawing of benefits will start in 1938.

To Carry Case Up.

A fine ruling from the United States Supreme Court will be sought at once, it was indicated.

E. C. Stearns & Co., and W. H. H. Chamberlain, of Syracuse, and Associated Industries of New York State, a membership corporation, brought two test cases on which the court ruled today.

In the lower courts, conflicting decisions were handed down. In the Stearns-Chamberlain case the law was held constitutional except for one provision. In the Associated Industries case it was held invalid.

The firms contended operation of the law deprived them of their

Tribute Is Paid To Ellsworth By 5,000 Here

Noted Antarctic Explorer Tells of Raising U. S. Flag on Polar Ice.

Five thousand Washingtonians last night paid tribute to Lincoln Ellsworth, the man who raised the Stars and Stripes on the last unclaimed spot on earth, a 350,000-square-mile patch of Antarctica.

The scholarly aviator, who looks like anything but an explorer, former wild buffalo herder and gold prospector, drew wild applause as he told the National Geographic Society of his polar adventures.

One of the high points of his illustrated lecture, which was given in Constitution Hall, came when he related how he raised an American flag on a snow-blanketed polar plateau.

In claiming the vast strip of terrain for the United States he named it James W. Ellsworth Land for his father.

Gives Stirring Account.

Prior to the night function, Ellsworth was received at the White House by President Roosevelt and awarded the Geographic Society's coveted Hubbard Medal "for his heroic and extraordinary achievements in Arctic and Antarctic exploration 1925-1936."

His name thus took its place in history along with Peary, Amundsen and Byrd.

Geographic Society members listened with rapt attention while Ellsworth unfolded a stirring account of his latest Polar expedition as movies of the hazardous trip were flashed on the screen.

Action pictures showed Ellsworth winging his way across a previously unexplored strip of the globe in his single-motored, all-metal plane, Polar Star.

The ship, with Herbert Hollick-Kenyon as pilot and Ellsworth as navigator, made four landings in the 2,340-mile flight begun November 23, 1935, at Dundee Island, below the tip of South America.

After battling fog, blizzards and snowdrifts, the explorers were forced down 16 miles short of Little America, their gasoline supply exhausted in soaring above unexpected mountain peaks, one towering 13,000 feet above sea level.

Capitol His Home Till Ice-Box Raid Sends Him to Jail

After having wintered in the Senate wing of the Capitol, Fulton A. Bond, 22, Negro, has taken up residence at the Fifth Precinct Station, where he is being held for investigation.

Bond, unable to afford a Connecticut avenue apartment or a Massachusetts avenue mansion, decided he'd have a good address, anyway. So he went to live in the Senate, he said.

Dodging Capitol guards, he slept on ledges in little frequented rooms and obtained at least some of his meals at the Senate restaurant.

It was while making a nocturnal raid on the restaurant ice-box that Bond was discovered.

Sandusky County, Ohio, Faces Problem: Has Too Much Money

By the Associated Press.

Fremont, Ohio, April 15.—Sandusky County's treasury literally bulged with currency today, presenting officials with a problem of plenty.

The situation recently became so acute, explained County Auditor Oscar J. Stierwalt, that he urged township trustees to obtain their real estate tax funds immediately.

County accounts in eight banks that qualified as depositories have reached the legal limit.

Treasurer Howard Zimmerman seeks surcease from an ever-mounting surplus.

The banks put up security covering deposits totaling $475,000. The treasury balance is now $688,388.53, leaving more than $200,000 in the county's custody.

Stierwalt said the treasurer, were he to deposit the surplus, would be held accountable through his bond should the bank to which he entrusted the money fail.

Hence, the auditor explained, the treasurer passed the responsibility to the board of commissioners, which has a safety deposit box in one of the depositories.

"A comparable situation existed last year, too," said Stierwalt. "The county's total indebtedness is between $400,000 and $500,000, and we have an assessed valuation of approximately $62,000,000. Our present average tax rate is 10.85 mills, less by a fraction of a mill than last year's."

Prompt payment of taxes, he added, and the fact that certain refunds scheduled last February were delayed because of pending State legislation were factors in building the present treasury balance.

Stierwalt said the county has a $92,000 balance in a sinking fund, adding, "and we're building a new courthouse as a PWA project without assessing the taxpayers a penny."

Congress' Talks to Be Sent Out With 'Castor Oil' to the Voters

Castor-oil paper—two million extra pounds of it—will be brought here by Congress so Congressmen can have campaign speeches printed and sent to constituents, Ansel Wold, clerk of the Joint Committee on Printing, revealed yesterday.

"It's election year," Wold said, "and the committee knows the printing office will be asked for millions of copies of speeches made in Congress. Therefore, we intend to be prepared, and we are increasing our paper order for the Government's next six month's supply."

Castor-oil sizing is a "new wrinkle" in paper, and a type never before bought by the committee, Wold said.

"It may sound funny for me to say that Congressional speeches will be printed on paper containing castor oil, but I have been informed that no one can tell the difference between castor oil paper and the usual kind. Our experts say it will not be sticky, smelly, or in any way unpleasant to handle.

"It does, however, have the property of causing ink to dry quickly, and since Congressmen are always in a rush to get speeches to their districts, quick-drying properties in paper are important items to consider."

The fact that reprints of speeches are being ordered in unprecedented quantities—millions of copies—also influenced the committee to seek bids on the new paper, Wold said. If ordinary paper were used, the printing office would be required to slow up its presses waiting for ink to dry, he declared.

The full committee, headed by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, met yesterday and approved the estimates of committee experts calling for bids on 39,872,000 pounds of paper. This is approximately 2,000,000 pounds more than was ordered for the previous six-month period. The total cost of the new order will approximate $2,600,000. Bids will be opened on May 18, contracts to be awarded the following week.

And, if hours are shortened, should wages be lowered . . . or remain the same?

Strikes, NRA Delay 42 of 76 Ships for Navy

Aircraft Carriers Being Built at Newport News Are Retarded.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

A delay in the completion of at least 42 of the 76 warships now being built to bring the Navy up to full authorized strength was disclosed yesterday in a Navy Department report on construction progress.

Naval officers said the delay in construction, started many months ago, was caused by the shortened work-week under the old NRA and strikes in private shipyards.

The report showed that of the 76 ships, 30 were expected to be completed before the end of the year; 32 were more than two-thirds finished, and 5 had passed the halfway mark.

Shipyards, including navy yards, have reported, however, that the completion date, as specified in the contracts, must be moved ahead on the calendar from one month to one year on many vessels to meet conditions unforeseen when the contracts were signed.

Navy officers recalled that Rear Admiral E. S. Land, chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, had warned at hearings on the NRA shipbuilding code that a reduction in working hours below 40 hours a week "would interfere unduly with the proper prosecution of the naval building program, as well as with the normal ship repairing activities of the Navy and private shipyards."

Code Study Cited.

A study of the shipbuilding code, just issued by the NRA division of review, asserted that "peak employment on naval contracts was seriously delayed by the code hours."

Prior to July 1, 1933, the study said, the shipbuilding industry worked on a 44-48 hour basis, giving the men an average work-week of 37½ hours. The 36-hour week under the code, it added, reduced the average work-week to 29-31 hours and the average pay check to $23.60.

Included among the delayed ships are the Navy's two new aircraft carriers. The Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. has reported the Yorktown, scheduled to be completed in October, will not be finished until March, 1937, and that there will be a delay of from four to five months in completing the Entenrprise.

Completion of the heavy cruiser Quincy at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation yards has been delayed four months, and the Philadelphia Navy Yard has reported there will be an undetermined delay in completing the heavy cruiser Wichita.

Light Cruisers Delayed.

The New York Shipbuilding Corporation estimates it will take from 10 months to a year longer than expected to complete the light cruisers Savannah, Nashville and Phoenix. The New York and Philadelphia navy yards report delays of four to five months in finishing the Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

The new naval treaty among the United States, Great Britain and France was discussed at a luncheon conference yesterday by President Roosevelt and Norman Davis, head of the American delegation to the recent London naval conference.

At his press conference earlier the President was asked if the treaty would be sent to the Senate for ratification during this session of Congress. He said no decision had been reached.

Davis left last night for New York, but will return early next week. It was understood a decision might be made then.

Birthday Jubilee Is Urged for Pope

Vatican City, April 15 (AP).—Pope Pius XI had under consideration tonight a suggestion to proclaim a jubilee year beginning May 31 to celebrate the eightieth year of his life.

The prelate, oldest ruling monarch in the world, will be 79 on that date.

The suggestion was advanced by ecclesiastical and lay dignitaries who indicated their desire for the entire Roman Catholic Church to celebrate the Holy Father's birthday.

A jubilee year, it was predicted, would produce a favorable effect on Italian finances, since there was a considerable reduction in tourist trade after imposition of economic and financial sanctions against Italy for her aggression in East Africa.

Bar Association Hears Talk on Public Lands

"A Piece of Public Land" was the subject of a lecure by George A. Waters at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Federal Bar Association yesterday at the Harrington Hotel. Waters is a solicitor for the Department of the Interior.

Waters told of the area of public lands and also lands which have been given to railroads and schools. Railroads have grants which are equal to four and one-half times the area of Pennsylvania, he stated.

The association voted to attend the luncheon meeting of the American Bar Association at the Mayflower Hotel on May 6.

Illinois Winds Favor Roosevelt; Borah Showing Splendid But in Vain.

By Franklyn Waltman

THERE always is a tendency to read too much significance into the results of primary elections, such as those in Illinois and Wisconsin within the last week. The results in the long run do not always actually mean what they seem to on the surface.

WALTMAN

But the vote piled up in Wisconsin and Illinois by President Roosevelt cannot be ignored. Those results, after they are discounted for one reason or another, seem to be weather vanes indicating how the 1936 political winds are blowing—and on the basis of the primaries in two States, they are gentle, caressing winds for Mr. Roosevelt.

Unopposed in the Democratic primary for the Illinois Presidential preference, President Roosevelt in Cook County, which is chiefly Chicago, received substantially more than twice as many votes as did Senator William E. Borah and Col. Frank Knox, the two Republican Presidential aspirants, combined. He had a margin there of 467,000 votes over the two Republican candidates. In 1932 he carried Cook County by only 230,000.

Although down-State Illinois normally is overwhelmingly Republican, Mr. Roosevelt even there ran close behind the combined vote of the two Republican contenders.

Now these figures properly are subject to some discount. In the first place, a bitter contest over State offices in the Democratic primary brought the adherents of that party to the polls, while the rank and file of Republicans were apathetic toward the contests in their party. Undoubtedly many Republicans who will vote next November stayed home.

There also were, when 5,754 out of the 7,426 precincts of the State had been tabulated, about 44,000 Democrats who participated in their party's gubernatorial election who did not mark their ballots for Mr. Roosevelt. Undoubtedly some—but not all—will be found in the Republican column in November.

On the other hand, consideration must be given to the contention that many of the Republicans who voted for Senator William E. Borah will vote in November for Mr. Roosevelt, because the Idahoan will not be the Republican nominee. How many is anyone's guess—but it is clear that, despite the comparatively splendid showing made by Senator Borah in Illinois, he will not be the Republican nominee.

Another aspect of the Illinois situation is the crushing defeat of the Kelly-Nash Democratic machine in the Horner-Bundesen gubernatorial fight. Gov. Henry Horner has established his right to the party's leadership and in rewarding his friends and punishing his foes, some Democratic disaffection in the Chicago area is bound to result—although President Roosevelt kept out of that fight.

But when all these factors are considered and additions and subtractions—which are based solely on guesswork—are made to the vote received by the President in the Illinois primary, it is obvious that he is virtually as strong in that State today as he was in 1932. Then he carried the State by approximately 450,000. For the benefit of argument, let us say that he is only one-half as strong. Yet Illinois still is safely in the Roosevelt column.

This is important because in order to win this year, the Republicans must carry some Middle Western States. Carrying New England and the Atlantic Seaboard States will not be enough. The Wisconsin primary a week ago, when President Roosevelt received two votes for every one cast for Senator Borah, demonstrated to most observers that that State was outside Republican reach. If this week's result means Illinois likewise is Democratic—and it looks that way—then the going for the Republicans becomes that much harder.

It is not alone in Illinois and Wisconsin that the winds appear to be favoring the Democrats. It is so in many parts of the country, outside of the Atlantic Seaboard States and, perhaps, West Virginia and Ohio. For instance, in Pittsburgh yesterday the registration books were closed for the year, with 130,545 Democrats and 125,718 Republicans recorded. It was the first time in Pittsburgh's history that the Democrats have had a plurality on the city's registration lists.

In California the Democratic registration gains have been overwhelming. In Los Angeles County, for example, the Democratic registration is 735,799 Democrats to 468,720 Republicans—in 1932 the relative position of the two parties was reversed, the Republicans outnumbering the Democrats then about 6 to 4. Jumping over to San Francisco County, traditional Republican territory, the same story is found: Democrats, 181,723 to 101,600 Republicans.

Summed up, these developments point a moral for the Republicans. It is that they have been woefully deficient, no matter how good their intentions, in demonstrating to the country the fallacies of the New Deal, just as the Republicans in the Senate, excepting Senator Arthur Vandenberg, have been grossly negligent of their duties as a vigilant minority.

Once the Republicans select a Presidential candidate and concentrate their fire behind one man, they may be able to make progress with the electorate—but they have not done so yet and the fact cannot be concealed by all the rosy optimistic press releases which may come out of Republican headquarters.

Fighting Renewed On Mongol Border

Moscow, April 15 (U.P.).—Fighting between Japanese and Soviet frontier patrols was renewed today on the Manchukuo-Siberia border, official dispatches from Khabarovsk reported.

The latest friction occurred on Mossinsky Island in the Ussuri River, which has been Russian territory since the Peking Treaty of 1761.

Seven Manchukuo wood cutters, protected by five armed soldiers, were felling trees on the island when a Soviet patrol approached and fired warning shots. Subsequently a detachment of 35 Japanese-Manchu troops arrived from a nearby village. They fired on the Soviet patrols and retreated only after the Reds had returned the fire.

2 Groups Fight Move to Delay Rail Rate Cut

State Regulatory Units, Senate Committee Head Defend Slashes.

By the Associated Press.

While a dispute between rail management and labor over a bill to protect employes displaced in co-ordination projects was aired before a Senate committee, Eastern railroads encountered opposition yesterday from two sources in their move to postpone a projected passenger-fare cut for 18 months.

After more than a year of study, the Interstate Commerce Commission recently ordered railroads to slash the basic coach rate from 3.6 to 2 cents a mile. With the exception of the Baltimore & Ohio, major Eastern carriers requested postponement of the June 2 effective date of the order and asked authority to establish an "experimetnal fare" of 2.5 cents a mile during the interim.

Representing members of State regulatory bodies, the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners told the commission yesterday that a 2.5-cent rate would not appeal to the masses of travelers sufficiently to bolster passenger traffic. It urged the commission not to postpone the rate cut.

Taking a similar view, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said he hoped the commission "will not back down."

Views Are Divergent.

Apparently referring to fare cuts in the West and South, Wheeler said that "wherever the railroads have reduced their fares, they have increased traffic."

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' committee, and John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, expressed widely divergent views before Wheeler's committee on his bill to protect rail workers displaced in co-ordination projects.

Disclosing that negotiations between management and labor representatives seeking voluntary agreement on a plan of protection had collapsed April 9, Harrison said the bill had been presented to insure this protection by the payment of dismissal compensation and by giving the I. C. C. authority to study proposed consolidations to determine their effect on rail labor.

Saying the bill would give the commission "control over almost every activity of the railroads that results in reduction of employment," Pelley added that "we couldn't even take off a dining car without permission."

Debated Often.

After Harrison had said this was not the purpose of the measure, Pelley retorted: "I am saying what the bill does, rather than what Mr. Harrison says it does."

The question of how labor should be protected in co-ordinations and consolidations has been debated almost since the inception of the Government's rail co-ordination program in 1933. Transportation Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman consistently has urged that the problem be worked out through negotiation and this view was echoed recently in a letter to management and labor representatives from President Roosevelt.

The passenger fare situation also has been a contentious issue in rail circles since the commission prescribed the new low fares in February.

Drive for Pensions Denied by Harlan

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt was told yesterday by M. A. Harlan, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, that there is no organized movement among World War organizations for monthy pensions to veterans.

Harlan, who called at the White House to invite the President to the convention of the Disabled American Veterans in Milwaukee in July, said:

"I told the President that reports that there was an organized movement among the World War organizations to force immediate monthly payments for all who served was without the slightest foundation so far as the D. V. A. is concerned. We have taken a determined stand not to be diverted from our position of providing the fullest and most adequate measure of relief to those handicapped as a result of their wartime disabilities.

"In the meantime, we are urging upon Congress legislation to provide for universal conscription of all classes in case of a national emergency and we are also earnestly endeavoring to obtain enactments to curb subversive movements in this country—particularly in the military and naval service.

Mortgage Bill Inflation Bloc Loses Struggle

Byrns Rules 218 Names Needed to Force House Vote on Lemke Bill.

House inflationists lost what may be their last chance to get a vote on the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill yesterday when Speaker Joseph Byrns ruled that 218 signatures are needed to force a vote on the measure.

After weeks of hopeless effort to sign up a farm inflation petition produced a maximum of 214 signers, inflationists had attempted a new stratagem in an attempt to force to the front an issue that most observers already believed was in a state of collapse.

Claiming there are now only 429 members actually in House attendance, they asked Byrns to rule that 429, rather than the legal 435, constituted "total membership" of the House.

Rules Against Bloc.

Had he done this, they would have needed only 215 signatures to force a vote—one more name than they now have.

But the Speaker ruled the other way. He said that it is the clear inference of the House petition rule that only a majority of the 435 legal membership can discharge a committee from consideration of a bill. He said that "in the interest of proper and orderly procedure it should be definitely known and stated in advance how many signatures are required."

Privately, inflationists were willing to concede defeat for this session, but declared they would carry their fight for expanded currency into the coming campaign.

Patman Drops Fight.

Leading the farm inflation fight, Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, said he will continue the solicitation of petition signatures, and if a vote was not had, will "carry it to the country."

The recognized House inflation leader, Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, had long since given up the currency expansion fight so far as this session is concerned.

Several weeks ago he instituted a fight for currency expansion in lieu of the President's proposed new taxes, but later recognized the futility of such an effort and dropped it.

Yesterday, however, he predicted a change of sentiment "when the Seventy-fifth Congress meets."

Church, Lodge, Bingo Parties, Raffles Banned

fare activities of churches, lodges, parent-teacher and veteran organizations will be seriously handicapeded by the ban on games of chance at all benefit affairs announced yesterday by United States District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Many charitable, social and wel-

Included as "games of chance" by Garnett were raffles, lotteries, punch boards, claw machines, wheels of fortune and other carnival devices, bingo and similar games that have heightened popular interest at the carnivals and benefit parties of hundreds of religious, fraternal and social groups in the District.

Leaders of these groups interviewed last night, felt, without exception, that the ban on these games would deprive them of one of their major sources of revenue and would prove "a serious blow" to their charitable and welfare work.

The decision to enforce the anti-gambling laws at all benefit affairs, regardless of the purpose for which the funds to be raised are expended, was taken, Garnett explained, because of complaints made last week regarding the raffles conducted by Almas Temple, Brightwood Commandery of Knights Templar and Anacostia Masonic Lodge. Forced to act in these cases, it was felt similar functions of other groups should be barred to show no partiality.

Cource of Church Revenue.

Summer carnivals featuring raffles, wheels of fortune and other games of chance are run each year by virtually all of the Catholic churches in the District. The proceeds of these carnivals go to meet parish expenses and to care for the poor.

Yesterday morning, only a few hours before Garnett announced his ruling, the Rev. Joseph V. Buckley, of St. Francis Xavier Church, announced that a card party and bingo party would be held tomorrow night for the benefit of the building fund of the new church now under construction at Twenty-eighth street and Pennnsylvania avenue southeast, after hearing the ruling Father Buckley announced that a social meeting would be held.

At St. Joseph's Church, the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy said that of the $3,500 to $4,000 spent each year by the church on the parish poor, more than half was raised from the annual summer canival and occasional bingo parties. A bingo party was scheduled for last night, he said, to meet the deficit in the poor relief fund caused by the increased expenditures made necessary by the severity of the winter.

The Rev. Michael W. Hyle, of the Sacred Heart Church, which raises the larger portion of its poor relief funds in a similar manner, was equally dismayed. The church had been running carnivals for the last five or six years, he pointed out.

"Carnivals have been the accepted method of raising funds," he added. "Games of chance added spice to the carnival. It wasn't always for the sake of the prize that the people played. Many joined in the fun because they knew the funds were going for a worthy purpose."

Numerous other Catholic and Protestant churches have found bingo parties and raffles an easy way of raising funds for poor relief and church expenses.

Affected to Lesser Extent.

Parent-teacher organizations did not seem to be affected to the same extent as church and fraternal groups, many of the associations raising funds from entertainments, luncheons and plays in the schools. Card and bingo parties, however, are an important source of revenue to many of the groups in meeting their contributions to the student-aid and donating gifts to the schools.

"There's lots worse things than playing bingo," commented Mrs. Maude A. Wine, of the Daughters of America. "You can make harm of anything if you have a mind to. But I don't see anything wrong in playing a little bingo for pastime and to help raise funds for worthy purposes."

Bingo proceeds, she said, were used for the upkeep of the Daughters' home for aged members, the orphans' home and other charitable work of the organization.

"I can't see any harm in a card party," replied Miss Nicie Perrell, department president of the American Legion Auxiliary, when asked to comment on Garnett's ruling.

Under Garnett's ruling "games of skill" such as the popular pin games, will be permitted, but any prize drawing of numbered admission tickets will come under the "lottery" interpretation. The list of "blacklisted" may be increased, it was pointed out, as investigation determines that "chance" predominates. Organizations running benefit affairs are expected to submit their lists of games in advance to the District attorney's office to be passed on.

Copyright by Associated Press.

Wreckage that followed explosion of a "suicide bomb" designed by Dr. William D. Moriarty, who was killed with his wife at Los Angeles, yesterday, when he set off the home-made machine while sitting in his auto. Two other occupants of the car were injured.

Professor Kills Himself, Wife By Bomb Blast

2 Friends in Car Injured; Act Laid to Worries Over Finances.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 15.—"Suicide prompted by financial worries"—that was the police explanation tonight for the carefully rehearsed "human bomb" death of Dr. William D. Moriarty, 59-year-old economics professor, and his wife, Dorothy.

Detective Lieut. Thomas Sketchley said Moriarty apparently had planned for weeks the death that came when he set off a home-made bomb while he, his wife and two friends sat in an automobile.

Harley McCoy, 38, and Eleanor Thonis, 21, the friends, were injured.

"Look what I've got," McCoy quoted Moriarty, University of Southern California economics professor. He turned to see the professor clutching a small black box in his lap. A shattering explosion followed.

Both McCoy and Miss Thonis, his fiancee, said Moriarty had "practiced" the explosion a week ago.

"We thought he was just being eccentric when he had us drive to the end of that street and sit there while he displayed a black box that he said was some kind of a camera," Miss Thonis said. But the box was identical to the one he held last night.

The detective said Moriarty left several sealed letters for his son, John Moriarty, of Chicago. The son is en route here.

A signed note, written in ink and couched in Biblical language, was found in Moriarty's billfold. It read:

"If the Lord will be with me, and deliver into my hands the power to do good, with that power I will do good with all my might."

Sketchley said Moriarty recently lost money in a gold mining venture in the Calico Mountains, on the east rim of the Mojave Desert.

Allegany Jail Tested, Held Gangster-Proof

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 15.—Allegany County's jail is strong enough to hold two alleged gangsters who will go to trial May 4 in circuit court on a charge of murder, said Federal officers from Washington after an investigation today.

This precaution was taken, it was explained, because one of the two prisoners is now under sentence to Alcatraz Prison, Calif., and was brought to Maryland by Department of Justice agents.

States Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, accompanied four Federal officers to Cumberland and inspected the local jail. The two prisoners, Albert S. Sutton and Albert McDermott, accused of aiding in the slaying of Allen B. Wilson, a Washington newspaper agent at Takoma Park, Md., have had their trial removed to this county.

Wendel Absolved By Mercer Jurors

Trenton, N. J., April 15 (AP).—Prosecutor Erwin E. Marshall, of Mercer County, announced tonight the grand jury investigating charges Paul H. Wendel kidnaped the Lindbergh baby had voted a "no bill," which absolved Wendel of guilt.

Marshall announced after the grand jury adjourned until April 28 that "there is no indictment against Wendel."

Asked if that meant that no bill had been voted against the disbarred Trenton lawyer, now a prisoner in Mercer County Jail, Marshall replied:

"I might as well tell you because you'll find out, anyway, that (no bill) has been voted."

The prosecutor also announced that "no other indictments have been voted in the case as yet."

He was asked if the grand jury considered any conspiracy indictments or indictments to obstruct justice against any witnesses who testified in the case.

"Those matters have not been taken up," Marshall replied.

Hagerstown, Md., April 15.—Thomas Simpson, Hagerstown merchant, was exonerated of blame in the death of Conrad Norford, 5, who died from injuries received when he was run down by a car driven by Simpson.

Flogging Death Jury Selected; All 6 'Anti-Red'

Panel of Rural Floridians Completed Unexpectedly on Third Day.

By the Associated Press.

Bartow, Fla., April 15.—Six jurors, each of whom assured Chief Defense Attorney Pat Whitaker that he was opposed to communism as Whitaker defined it, were sworn in today to try the first of the cases growing out of the flogging death of Joseph Shoemaker at Tampa.

Communism, Whitaker told the six jurors and other veniremen questioned during the 2½ days required to select the jury, stands for racial equality and destruction of "our homes, our churches and our Anglo-Saxon civilization."

Both the State and the defense accepted the six-man jury with unexpected suddenness today after Whitaker and State Attorney Rex Farrior, of Tampa, had clashed many times over the questions each asked the veniremen.

Judge Robert T. Dewell then recessed court until tomorrow afternoon to allow the State to bring its more than 100 witnesses here from Tampa, where a first effort to hold the trials failed when a jury could not be obtained from a venire of 108 men.

The six jurors finally sworn in are residents of rural Polk County.

Five of them are mechanics. The sixth is an elderly WPA worker who told the defense attorney co-workers on WPA projects had not discussed "this transaction."

The "transaction" started in Tampa last November 30 when a mob took three unemployed oganizers with admitted socialistic leanings out to a wooded section, flogged them, tarred and feathered them and left them to care for their own injuries.

Ray Test Yields Titterton Clew In Dress Stains

Cord Reported Only Other Lead to Attack-Slayer of Young Writer.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 15.—A few stains on the clothing of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton tonight offered the first promising clew to the man who garroted the young author and left her in a bathtub of her apartment last Friday.

Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, city toxicologist, penetrated the wall of mystery that has surrounded the Beekman place murder with a laboratory analysis that revealed the composition of stains on Mrs. Titterton's clothing and on a bedspread, he said.

He declined to reveal other results of feverish tests he has conducted, groping toward some hint of the strangler's identity, but said that the clew should be definite "in two or three days."

Rays Reveal Stain.

The stains were disclosed by ultra-violet rays in a skirt, bathrobe and bedspread taken from the apartment.

The 34-year-old wife of a National Broadcasting Co. executive had been assaulted and strangled with an improvised garrote fashioned from her pajama top and blouse. Her nude body was then placed in the bathtub.

Detectives hoped the stains might show that some substance had been brought into the apartment by the killer, which would narrow their field of search, and remove the threat the case might take its place beside the Dot King, Vivian Gordon and other unsolved murder mysteries.

Cord Hard to Trace.

Virtually their only other link between Mrs. Titterton and her assailant was a frayed piece of common cord, believed to have been used to bind the victim's wrists. Her hands were untied when the body was found, but her wrists were chafed and the cord was found nearby.

The cord did not match any other piece in the apartment, but dealers said it was of an extremely common type and would be almost impossible to trace.

Assistant Chief Inspector John A. Lyons said the cord probably came from the Kentucky Mills, of Frankfort, Ky., and not from a Philadelphia concern, as first believed.

It is of a peculiar composition of Italian jute and other fibrous materials and is often used for Venetian blinds.

Roosevelt Aims To Keep Aloof In Tax Fight

President Hints He Will Not Press Views Until Bill Reaches Senate.

By Robert C. Albright.

Members of the tax-drafting Ways and Means sub-committee have received word from the White House that the President does not intend to crack any bull whips in an effort to force his own tax views on that chamber, it was learned last night.

Closely followed the progress of House tax draftsmen through contacts with leaders, the President was represented as expressing neither approval nor disapproval of changes made in his original tax recommendations, and was said to have no present inclination to take a hand in the struggle.

Members of the Ways and Means sub-committee have interpreted his position to mean that he will not insist on inclusion of the $221,000,000 in new processing taxes, so obnoxious to House members, in the House draft of the measure, regardless of what recommendations he might make in that respect when the bill reaches the Senate.

May Reinstate Process Tax.

Processing taxes were a major part of the President's plan for raising $792,000,000 for the next three years, but they were quickly sidetracked by the House group, which declared it could find adequate revenue without them. The Administration is expected to institute a vigorous move to reinstate them when the bill reaches the Senate.

The House tax sub-committee today will receive its first rough draft of its new tax measure, embracing a plan for taxing corporate earnings, with the rate lowered in proportion to dividends paid out to shareholders. Corporate earnings up to $10,000 would be taxed on a scale ranging from 1 to 29.7 per cent, and corporations earning more than $10,000, on a scale from 4 to 42½ per cent.

Despite a "lag" in tax collections likely to result from delayed declaration in corporate dividends, and a preferential 22½ per cent flat rate allowed under certain conditions on earnings used for debt payment, the sub-committee still estimates it will realize $591,000,000 on this tax, when coupled with normal and surtax levies.

Members still insist that the 90 per cent tax on refunded processing levies, estimated to yield $100,000,000; taxes collected from foreign corporations and alien individuals; and revenue picked up from extending the capital stock and excess profits tax through the present taxable year, will bring the yield of their bill to the neighborhood of $799,000,000 already estimated.

It was learned yesterday that the sub-committee headed by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, has provided no preferential treatment for railroads, despite appeals made by spokesmen for the Association of American Railroads.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel, had asked that a tax exemption be granted railroads on earnings up to 1 per cent of total funded debt obligations outstanding, and to make certain other deductions for improvements forced by public agencies, and for depreciation and losses under given conditions.

Fletcher had argued that if insurance companies were allowed a favored 15 per cent rate—and in the public interest—railroads should be given similar concessions.

While granting railroads the exclusive right to continue filing of consolidated returns, the sub-committee provides no other railroad relief other than that set forth under the general provision for debt-ridden companies and corporations in receivership.

Railroads in receivership (constituting some 28 per cent of the total rail mileage) would pay only 15 per cent on earnings. Debt relief provisions of the bill, which provides for all corporations alike, allow a 22½ per cent tax in lieu of the graduated scale on that portion of earnings applied to debt, with the added condition that debts must exceed accumulated earnings.

Debts Specifically Defined.

Debts are specifically defined in the bill to cover only those prior to March 31, 1936, evidenced in writing, which at the time of issuance had a maturity value of more than three years; existing for more than three years prior to March 3, 1936, with evidence in writing; or incurred for capital account.

Other provisions of the rough tax bill draft received today by the Hill sub-committee will include:

A special 15 per cent flat tax on earnings of banks and insurance companies, with a similar preferred rate for the same type of foreign corporations doing business in this country.

A 15 per cent rate on foreign corporations in receivership in the courts of this country.

A 22½ per cent rate on other foreign corporations having an establishment in this country, based on income derived from domestic sources.

A 15 per cent tax on American income of corporations which, not having offices in this country, still derive earnings from domestic sources.

A 10 per cent tax on income received by non-resident aliens from domestic corporations or other American sources.

A 10 per cent tax on dividends to non-resident aliens from foreign corporations doing 75 per cent or more of their business in this country, based only on income allocable to the United States.

A $35,000,000 refund from taxes imposed on floor stocks on hand when the AAA was invalidated, and refund of taxes levied against processed commodities, where they were either exported or sold to tax-exempt institutions.

A 22½ per cent tax on corporations under contractual obligations not to pay out dividends.

Reduction of the capital stock tax from $1.40 to 70 cents per $1,000, and the repeal of the law after June 30; and repeal of the excess profits tax after expiration of the present taxable year.

President Roosevelt, who recently discussed taxes with Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee at the White House, told reporters yesterday that he understood the Senate Finance Committee will open hearings as soon as the tax bill is reported to the House, in order to expedite tax action.

Although the Hill sub-committee will review the initial draft of its tax bill, it is not expected to reach the full Ways and Means Committee before Monday of next week, and may not be finally reported to the floor of the House before Wednesday. The House may pass the remainder of April considering it.

Doughton said yesterday he will ask for no more than 16 hours debate on the measure, and does not now intend to call for a special House rule for its consideration.

$85,000,000 Added To Flood Aid Bill

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday added $85,000,000 of projects to the omnibus flood control bill pending before the committee, swelling the total to about $485,000,000.

The committee also voted, 9 to 4, to ask the Federal Government to undertake the whole cost of such projects, including cost of land and damage to property caused by reservoirs, levees or similar undertakings. Previously some members had recommended asking the States and local governments to meet land and damage costs.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, said he expected the committee to vote out the bill little changed, possibly today.

President Presents Famous Medal to Noted Explorer

Harris & Ewing.

days later by the British exploring ship, Discovery II.

Praises Aids' Loyalty.

Of his aids left behind in his supply ship, the Wyatt Earp, named for the frontier marshal of Tombstone, Ariz., Ellsworth said:

"Money could not buy such loyalty as theirs."

Cheers swept through the hall as Ellsworth unfurled a tiny green and blue flag of the Geographic Society which he carried 60,000 miles on his three Antarctic expeditions and finally flew across the continent.

The flight, Ellsworth said, produced evidence that the Andes Mountains of South America extend in an unbroken chain beneath the Polar seas to Antarctica and stretch across the south Polar continent. They tend, he added, to confirm the belief that Antarctica is a single continent.

Ellsworth speculated on whether coal deposits would be found in the mountains.

Penguin eggs were included in the diet of the explorers.

"Those eggs," Ellsworth confided, "are delicious when made into omelets, but when boiled—ye gods!"

The explorer revealed he grew a beard on his trip and went three distressing months without a bath.

While in the polar region he wore silk and wool mixed underwear next to his skin, a second suit of camel-hair underwear, a flannel shirt and woolen pants. At times he walked about in a squirrel-skin coat. His foot was frozen despite the protection afforded by two pairs of heavy woolen socks and canvas knee boots with rubber soles.

"Our socks," he said, "always got wet." "We would thaw them out at night in our sleeping bags."

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Geographic Society president, introduced Ellsworth as "a world discovered who exemplifies the finest traditions of science—modesty, resource and valor."

Biggest AAA Beneficiary

payments, according to the Secretary's letter to Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, which did not name recipients of the checks, were given only indirectly.

$4-a-Ton Payments.

Thus the report stated that the largest participating company received $961,064. Payments to this extent were made at the rate of $4 per ton on 240,660 tons of surplus sugar cane of the 1934-35 crop.

The rest of the payments listed by the Secretary included only the advance 1935 payments. He stated, however, that in most cases the total payments would be about five to six times the individual advance 1935 payment listed.

The largest advances listed as follows: $103,667.94, $103,015.80, $99,617.28, $53,023.20, $45,533.40, $41,030.04, $34,690.80, $33,522.60, $32,576.28 $32,064.24.

These are understood to correspond roughly to the names listed above, although this could not be confirmed last night. To arrive at the figure received in AAA benefits by each of the companies named, the figure given above must be multiplied "about five to six times," as the Secretary stated.

Interest naturally centered about the $961,064 payment. Senator Arthur W. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, whose resolution to require publication of names of all AAA check recipients getting more than $10,000 is still awaiting Senate action, charged that a million-dollar AAA benefit check was received by the National City Bank of New York through Puerto Rican sugar producers.

A check of somewhat meager information available showed only that James H. Post and Henry E. Henneman, the former a director and the latter an officer of the National City Bank, are also connected in directorial capacities with the Fajardo Sugar Co.

Post is also director of numerous other sugar companies. He is chairman of the board of Cuban-American Sugar Co., president and director of the New Niquero Sugar Co., chairman of the National Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey and is a director of the Fajardo Sugar Co., the Central Aguirre Sugar Co. and the Holly Sugar Corporation.

'Red' Teachers Fewer in D. C. Than in Texas

Ballou Answers Blanton on Number of Columbia Graduates Here.

Fewer graduates and students of Teachers College, Columbia University, are teaching in District public schools than in the schools and colleges of Texas, home State of Representative Thomas L. Blanton.

This was revealed yesterday with the release of the reply by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou to Blanton's recent questionnaire letter requesting the number of teachers here who have been graduated from, or taken summer courses at, Teachers College.

The inference in Blanton's questionnaire was that such teachers had been exposed to the alleged "subversive influences" of men like Dr. George S. Counts and Dr. Charles A. Beard, whom Blanton has frequently assailed as "communistic." The number of teachers with the Teachers College "taint" evidently was to be cited by Blanton as proof of the need for retaining the "little red rider" which he slipped into last year's supply bill.

In his letter, Dr. Ballou pointed out that only 148 local teachers had been graduated from Columbia's Teachers College, and that an additional 565 had studied there.

Information furnished The Washington Post by the registrar of Teachers College reveals that more than 700 of its graduates and from 2,000 to 3,000 others who have taken summer courses there are teaching in Texas schools.

In Houston, Tex., with a population roughly 200,000 less than the District of Columbia, in 1932 there were 202 active teachers college graduates, almost 60 more than in the District of Columbia in the same year. In Blanton's home town of Abilene, with a population of 23,000, there were eight teacher college graduates teaching four years ago; while in Austin, where the University of Texas is located, there were 36 graduates.

Ballou's tabulation showed that 2,255 of the 2,968 teachers in the local school system have never attended teachers college. To secure the tabulation it was necessary to query every teacher in the schools. Fifteen who "are in ill health" have not replied to date, Ballou pointed out.

Ballou Lists Earnings.

In his letter Ballou also listed the expenses he received from the American Historical Association for the five years during which he has acted as secretary to the Commission of Social Studies, and his total expense payments and honorariums received for speeches and lectures in 1934 and 1935.

His expenses to and from meetings of the Commission on Social Studies, Dr. Ballou gave as $236.54, with additional expenses being met directly by the commission's head. His total honorariums for the last two years amounted to $922.64, Ballou said, of which $162.61 went for expenses, leaving a net income of $760.03.

Ballou's letter revealed that on Tuesday afternoon Blanton telephoned and insisted the questions be answered by 9 o'clock the following morning. On March 25, when Blanton wrote his original seven questions, he requested replies by the following day.

It was only after a stormy debate and by the margin of a single vote that the Board of Education, on April 1, decide dto answer Blanton's questions, which virtually all of the board members denounced as "impertinent and an imposition on the school officials."

Describe Selection.

Board members voted that an outline of the method by which local school teachers are selected be sent to Blanton with the information requested. In yesterday's letter, Ballou pointed out that "The Board of Examiners accept work done by candidates in any accredited colleges or universities at its face value, no preference whatsoever being given to the credits earned in one institution as compared with the credits earned in another," and that "neither the Board of Education, nor the Board of Examiners, nor the superintendent of schools, nor any other officer in the school system, as far as the superintendent knows, has advised teachers to attend one college or university rather than another."

According to the estimates of the registrar of Teachers College, an average of 50 full-year and 200 summer-course students from Texas study at Teachers College annually. The great majority return to their home State to teach. Many of them, particularly those taking summer courses, already are teachers.

LOSE FAT THE EASY WAY
Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.
Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.
Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers." If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.
Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.
So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat. Advt.

Long Illness Proves Fatal To Capt. Evans

Retired Naval Officer Was Former Governor of Virgin Islands.

Des Moines, April 15 (AP).—Capt. Waldo Evans, 66, retired U. S. Navy officer and former Governor of the American Samoa and Virgin Islands, died at the home of his niece, Mrs. William T. Sherman, here today.

In ill health since the death of his wife a year ago in an automobile accident in California, Capt. Evans suffered a paralytic stroke in December.

Capt. Evans was born in Indianapolis. He was in the Navy 46 years and during the World War he commanded a cruiser which convoyed troop ships across the Atlantic. He was made commander of the battleship Wyoming in 1919.

In 1920 Capt. Evans was detailed to American Samoa as its naval governor. Two years later, he was transferred to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station near Chicago as commander. Three and one-half years later he retired at 56. However, he was persuaded to remain in service and was sent to the Virgin Islands, where he acted as Governor four years, retiring May 1, 1931.

Mrs. Sherman said the body would be taken to Washington Friday for burial in Arlington National Cemetery. Mrs. Evans is buried at Arlington.

Freeman Pays Beck Tribute At Final Rites

Scores of Nation's Leaders Attend Funeral Service at the Cathedral.

Simple yet impressive funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at Washington Cathedral, high on Mount St. Alban, for former Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania.

Officiating at last rites for the silver-tongued orator was Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington. The Bishop read the Episcopal service for the dead, and then spoke briefly, breaking tradition, as he told of the affection and esteem with which the eminent Pennsylvania lawmaker, who died on Easter, was regarded by those who knew him.

The rites were attended by scores of persons prominent in the life of the Nation which Representative Beck served during his years in Congress.

But amid the distinguished gathering were many other men and women, from humbler walks of life, who were devoted to Representative Beck—persons who admired his flashing oratory and persons he had benefited during his life.

Many legations and embassies sent representatives to the funeral.

Honorary pallbearers included Justices Van Devanter and McReynolds of the United States Supreme Court, former Undersecretary of State William Castle, Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, and Representative Bertrand Snell, of New York; Henry N. Paul, of Philadelphia; Samuel Untermyer, of New York; Frank L. Crawford, of New York, and Wade H. Ellis.

Other honorary pallbearers, who could not reach Washington in time for the rites, which were held at 4 p. m., were former President Hoover, Wilbur Carr, George Wharton Pepper, John W. Davis, Newton D. Baker, John N. Garver, of New York; Thomas N. McCarter and Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District Supreme Court.

Temporary private burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Discrimination In Films' Sale Laid to 4 Firms

Distributors' Pool to Hurt Independents Charged in Missouri Suit.

By the Associated Press.

Jefferson City, April 15.—Four major national film distributors were entangled tonight in a legal battle over the right to operate in Missouri.

Attorney General Roy McKittrick, accusing the distributors of discriminating against independent theaters, opened his attack on two fronts.

Early in the day he brought suit in the State Supreme Court here, demanding the four, General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; Paramount Distributing Co. and R. K. O. Distributing Corporation, be disfranchised of their State corporation privileges. Then he turned to a St. Louis circuit court, where he sought to enjoin them, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries from continuing what he termed a "film monopoly."

In his quo warranto action in the Supreme Court, McKittrick identified General Theatrical Enterprises and Vitagraph as subsidiaries of Warner Bros. They and the others were charged with operating a film price-fixing pool—a pool the attorney general said was organized to aid Warner Bros. in a fight for control of three St. Louis theaters.

McKittrick's second blow was aimed at a pool he said existed between the four distributors and Fox Midwest Theaters, Inc., a theater chain operating in Missouri and Kansas; Universal Films Exchange, Inc., of New York; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation of New York; Columbia Pictures Corporation of New York and the United Corporation of New York. The pool, he said, was created to control sale of films in Kansas City, Springfield and Joplin.

In both the Supreme Court and the St. Louis cases, the film companies were accused of withholding first-run pictures from Fanchon & Marco, operators of the three St. Louis theaters, to force them to relinquish control of the houses to Warner Brothers.

British Nurse to Hang; Loses Second Appeal

Birmingham, England, April 15 (AP).—Home Secretary Sir John Simon tonight denied a second appeal for clemency for Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham and informed the 34-year-old woman she must be hanged tomorrow for the killing of a patient at her nursing home.

Sir John said he could find no ground on which to justify a reprieve.

The home secretary's decision came after Dr. Drummond Shields, former president of the Royal Medical Society, added his support to pleas of defense attorneys for clemency.

Mrs. Waddingham, the mother of five children, is to be hanged at 9 a. m. tomorrow at Windsor Green prison.

Freddie Bartholomew Case Settlement Sought

Los Angeles, April 15 (AP).—A letter expressing hope that "this disagreement can be settled without undue publicity or expense" passed today between attorneys in the battle for custody of Freddie Bartholomew, curly-hhaired child movie actor.

Leonard Meyberg, counsel for Freddie's mother, Mrs. Lillian Bartholomew, said he sent the letter to Felix Cunningham, representing the boy's aunt and guardian, Miss Millicent Bartholomew.

Mrs. Bartholomew arrived recently to press a fight, she said, to regain custody of her son.

Meyberg explained that the mailing of the letter ended the legal formalities necessary before actual court action is opened.

Lumbermen circulated handbills here which read:

"I. W. W. notice to all lumber workers: Lumber workers at Camp L are on strike for $5 a day, eight hours from camp to camp and no discrimination because of union affiliations. We ask for your unlimited support to help them get their demands."

Norris to Fight Private Rural Power Loans

Senate, House Conferees Meet Today to Weigh Changes in Bill.

By the Associated Press.

A controversy between House and Senate over the $420,000,000 rural electrification bill was foreshadowed yesterday when Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, author of the measure, served notice he would oppose the House provision for loans to private corporations.

Conferees from the two Houses will meet today in an effort to reach an agreement on the differences in the bill passed by the House and Senate. The bill is designed to provide electricity for about 1,000,000 farm homes.

Under the House measure, loans would be granted to private corporations, as well as governmental agencies and farmer organizations, to carry on electrification work. The Senate bill would exclude private corporations from the list of loan recipients.

"I am very much opposed to lending money to private power companies after the history of the past few years," Norris said. "The private companies serve only a few of the farmers, taking the cream of the market and leaving the less profitable consumers without service.

"I am opposed to the principle of lending Federal money to private corporations for private profit."

Norris said he also would fight for the Senate provision providing for nonpartisan administration of the electrification program. The Senate bill had a requirement, eliminated in the House, that appointments must be made on the basis of efficiency and without regard for politics.

He said he also would oppose the House amendment requiring that interest on the loans be 3 per cent or more. The Senate fixed a maximum of 3 per cent.

Under the Senate bill, which Norris pushed through with White House approval, the proposed permanent rural electrification administration would have $50,000,000 for each of the next two years, and $40,000,000 for each of the next eight years.

It could make loans for the construction of transmission lines, wiring of farm homes and for the purchase of electrical equipment.

The House bill would authorize a similar ten-year program, but with several changes in details aside from those opposed by Norris.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

Japan Refuses Smuggling Ban Aid, China Says

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, China, April 15.—Chinese officials said tonight three days of intensive conferences had failed to bring Japanese co-operation in an effort to halt large-scale smuggling into North China, which is depriving the national government of millions in sorely needed revenue.

Simultaneously, authorities said, the legitimate import trade in North China is being ruined.

Officials of the finance ministry conferred with the railway and foreign ministries for three days, but failed to produce an effective scheme. The Chinese said diplomatic protests to Tokyo about the smuggling, alleged to be carried on by Japanese and Koreans, were ignored there.

The latest difficulty placed in the way of Chinese authorities seeking to curb this illicit trade is the imposition of a blanket import duty by the new East Hopei autonomous regime on cotton goods, sugar and rayon, which is only 50 per cent as large as the Chinese maritime customs levies.

According to authorities here, North China officials have been informed by the Japanese that goods certified as cleared through Hopei's "private" customs must be recognized by the Nanking government as legally imported into China.

Chinese said they viewed this wave of smuggled goods pouring into the country along the northwestern shores of the Gulf of Chihli as evidence of Japanese desires to smash the Chinese maritime customs, from which the national government derives its principal revenues.

All of Ethiopia Believed Italy's Price of Peace

British Held Ready to Suspend Sanctions on Mussolini's Demand.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, April 15.—Belief that Italy, flushed by new military victories, intends eventually to demand a peace implying virtual Fascist nomination of the entire empire of Emperor Haile Selassie was expressed tonight in League of Nations circles.

Peace in Africa—under League auspices—seemed doubtful and distant after the Italian delegates for peace conversations arrived here without instructions from Premier Mussolini on a basis for settlement.

Some League quarters forecast an attempt by Il Duce to force the League to allow an Italian-dictated peace.

Abandoning his hope of getting the Italians and Ethiopians around a table for negotiations, Salvador de Madariaga, the League's peace representative, received the Italian delegates in the new palace of the League in an effort to learn Rome's attitude.

Officials Pessimistic.

After an hour's conversation between Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy, Dr. Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the League, and De Madariaga, League officials were pessimistic over prospects for achieving an early end of the war.

The Italians came to Geneva apparently without any mandate to discuss peace terms but merely, as an Italian spokesman said, to "discuss preparatinos for peace negotiations."

There was no meeting between the Italian and Ethiopian representatives.

A most difficult situation was created for the Committee of Thirteen—the League Council without Italy—which meets tomorrow to receive a report from De Madariaga.

Action Hinges on Report.

Upon the character of De Madariaga's report depends action by the sanctions committee of eighteen. The chairman of the committee, Dr. Augusto Vasconcellos, of Portugal, said he "might convoke it in the very near future."

An official report issued by the League on the effect of sanctions upon Italy contained a mass of statistics indicating that while Italy may be crushing the Ethiopians rapidly, sanctions are slowly but relentlessly strangling Italy's powers of resistance and there is a constant drain on Il Duce's gold reserve.

British trade with Italy has almost vanished, the report disclosed. In January of this year British purchase of Italian goods amounted to only $70,000, compared to $1,942,000 in January, 1935.

French imports in the same months totaled $159,000 this year as against $1,338,000 in January, 1935.

To Ask Sanctions' End.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Rome, April 15.—Premier Mussolini will demand that League of Nations sanctions against Italy be lifted before he discusses peace with Emperor Haile Selassie, diplomatic quarters reported today.

Diplomats said that Il Duce has instructed Baron Pompeo Aloisi, his envoy to Geneva, to tell Salvador de Madariaga, chairman of the League's Committee of Thirteen, that the League must drop sanctions and rescind its verdict branding Italy as the aggressor in the East African war before Italy will discuss peace terms.

They said that since he considers his victorious military campaign virtually ended, Mussolini decided to inform the League of his terms.

Britain May Drop Penalties.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, April 15.—Great Britain may offer to suspend sanctions against Italy in return for immediate cessation of hostilities in Ethiopia, diplomatic quarters reported tonight.

Following Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's departure for Geneva developments indicated that Britain is eager for early peace.

She was represented as reconciled to the fact that peace terms now must be more favorable to Italy than the abortive Hoare-Laval proposals, which would have pacified Italy with half of Ethiopia.

Ethiopian Credits Refused.

It was regarded as highly significant that the Ethiopian minister to the Court of St. James, Azaj Martin, during the last few days made vigorous but futile attempts to obtain British credits to finance the purchase of munitions here.

Martin made his appeals to the foreign office, but British armament firms declined to sell to Ethiopia on credit.

Banking circles regarded this development as further evidence that Ethiopia's defeat and ultimate submission to Italy are viewed by the government as inevitable.

Moreover, Eden's departure to attend the meeting of the conciliation Committee of Thirteen was accompanied by a statement that Britain is prepared to go as far as any other nation in applying or extending sanctions. But it was reaffirmed that single-handed action by Great Britain is out of the question.

Staff Talks Begin.

London, April 15 (AP).—British, French and Belgian military staff talks which foreign military observers regarded as an idle gesture to reassure French public opinion began today at the admiralty, war office and air ministry.

Restricted by limitations on their work, experts are exploring what to do should Germany march troops into Belgium and France.

France Warns Britain

alties lifted from Italy to insure Fascist support in her own controversy with Germany in the Rhine zone.)

Sarraut, in his address to the editors, warned the smaller European nations to back the French peace plan because, if collective security fails, "the greatest anguish" will be for them.

He promised that the government would, with "meritorious patience," use all its chances of resolving "by peaceful means" the dispute arising from Adolf Hitler's armed reoccupation of the Rhine territory.

But, he added, if such means do not prevail, "our military machine, our army, navy and air force, I assure you, are equal to the mission which might be given them."

Alluding to the differences between Great Britain and Italy, the premier asserted the French government is "struggling" to find a solution which would "save it from choice between equally precious friendships."

Speculating on the question of withdrawing from the League, Sarraut asked:

"Must we, in the presence of selfishness of some and evasion and weakness in others, renounce hope for an international regime of solidarity and assistance to think hereafter only of guaranteeing our own safety."

Army Inventory Taken.

The premier disclosed he had just "silently and seriously" taken "inventory" of France's military forces and war industries with the chiefs of the national defense and planned "new measures to increase their power, productivity and resources."

On the German-French controversy, Sarraut predicted "peace settlement" could be "durable only if those with whom we conclude them know they are not facing a feeble or yielding partner."

Upon receipt of the Italian appeal for support in lopping off sanctions, French officials said they would gladly ask the league to wipe out the penalties as soon as preliminary negotiations for Italo-Ethiopian peace appeared started on the way to success.

Grace Line Bars Longshoremen Listed by Union

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, April 15.—Activity slowed down ominously on the waterfront today amid a new labor crisis involving organized employers' attempts to crush "the radical and subversive leadership of San Francisco longshoremen."

Officials of the Grace Line refused to hire five work gangs dispatched through the San Francisco local of the International Longshoremen's Association to unload the intercoastal steamer Santa Rosa, immediate cause of the new trouble.

A dozen checkers, members of the Ship Clerks Association, quit work at the pier almost immediately. Eight ships lay in the stream, awaiting developments and several more were on their way into port.

The Grace Line offered to employ union longshoremen at the docks, not through the union-controlled hiring hall.

This was in line with the position of the Waterfront Employers Association, which yesterday severed relations with the San Francisco I. L. A. in a step obviously aimed to circumvent the left-wing leadership of Harry Bridges, head of the longshoremen's local.

Bridges appealed to the longshoremen's labor relations board for a meeting with the employers to discuss the working of the Santa Rosa and the eight ships. F. C. Gregory, attorney for the shipping men, refused the request.

The current trouble began when several members of the Santa Rosa's crew struck on the Atlantic Coast, demanding employment under Pacific Coast articles, which provide slightly higher pay. They were replaced.

PAYMENTS TO SUIT Your PURSE

The General Motors Instalment Plan enables dealers in General Motors cars to arrange the monthly payments best suited to your circumstances and the car you buy—whether the payments are $15, $20, $25, or any other amount per month.

The most satisfactory and economical plan on which to buy a car on instalments is the plan which exactly suits your individual requirements.

Seldom are two instalment buyers in the same financial circumstances. They differ both in the amounts they can pay down—and in their ability to pay comfortably certain amounts per month.

If you agree to pay more per month than you can afford, your car may become a burden and not a pleasure. If you pay less per month than you can comfortably afford, you pay too much for a financing service you do not need.

The General Motors Instalment Plan makes it easy for you to figure yourself what the costs of various payment terms are—at ½ of 1% of the original balance per month—for example, 6% for 12 months. And it will pay you to compare costs on this plan with other plans. When you do, be sure to include equally complete insurance protection.

One Step Forward.

After several years of controversy over the acquisition of an airport for Washington, Congress has authorized the appointment of a commission to select a site. Since this body has no money to take an option upon the site approved and no power to make the final choice, it cannot be said that the airport tangle is ended. The most that can be immediately expected is the choice of a personnel that will consider every angle of the question and resolve every doubt in the public interest.

The national character of the project is suggested by the provision that six members of Congress shall serve on this commission of nine. Yet the District has a large interest in the proposed airport, especially since it may have to pay part of the cost. In Baltimore the Government is spending $1,100,000 on a municipal airport, through the PWA, to be matched by $900,000 in city funds. Presumably this landing field will be completely controlled by the city. If the District is to be required to pay a substantial share of the cost of the local project, it should certainly be adequately represented upon the site-selecting commission.

No doubt the President will choose a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, so that the new airport may be properly integrated with general plans for development of Washington. If only one District Commissioner is chosen, the third member to be named by the President might well be a representative of the District's civic groups.

The effort to have the commission select a site and make its report before Congress adjourns is commendable in some respects. Yet a hasty compromise that would not assure the District an adequate airport would merely lead to a renewal of the controversy and, therefore, further delay. In a matter of this importance thorough examination of all the issues involved is more important than snap judgment to beat the adjournment gun.

Caulking A Sieve.

The members of the House Ways and Means Committee are still trying to plug the escape vents in the President's corporation tax program, which appears to be as full of holes as a sieve.

It is impossible to avoid concluding that the plan was conceived by advisers with singularly little knowledge of corporation finance, and that it was launched by the President with the slightest comprehension of its character. Otherwise some method would surely have been suggested for circumventing efforts to evade the tax-collector by declaring stock dividends. Ease of evasion, however, is less serious than the inducement given to change dividend policies for no good reason except the purpose of avoiding taxes.

The controversy that has arisen over the taxable status of stock dividends provides another argument for abandoning this whole ill-conceived proposal instead of trying to patch up a measure that would be totally inadequate as a revenue producer even if all the leaks were stopped.

Outside The Law.

The recent case of James A. Bettis serves as an illustration of the need for a new juvenile court law. Although he is only 15 years of age, a coroner's jury ordered him held for the Police Court as the driver of a car which inflicted fatal injuries on a pedestrian. But the Police Court does not try the cases of children less than 17 years old. And the Juvenile Court has no jurisdiction over homicide cases under the present law.

As a result of conflicting statutes, therefore, the case has reached stalemate. There is a good deal of satisfaction over young Bettis' escape from the Police Court. No modern judicial system exposes children to the ordeal of criminal prosecution. Even though the boy was unquestionably at fault in trying to move an automobile without knowing how to drive, it would be indefensible to treat him as a major criminal. On the other hand, it is certainly unfortunate that his case cannot be submitted to the sympathetic treatment of a modern juvenile court.

The new juvenile court bill pending in Congress would give the children's court jurisdiction over any person under 18 years of age who violates a law or is otherwise delinquent. Instead of treating children as criminals, thus giving them a quasi-heroic notoriety in the eyes of some of their friends, it would adapt procedure to the psychology of the immature mind. Congress could not render a greater service to the delinquent children of Washington than the enactment of this measure.

Our Costly Cotton Policy.

Few experiments launched by the New Deal have been subjected to more justifiable criticism than the plowing under of cotton. The questionable nature of this program has been patent from the beginning. But not until the Brookings Institution published its recent study on "Cotton and the AAA" was the public given a thorough and impartial analysis of the effects of the adjustment act upon our largest export crop.

Of foremost importance is the curtailment of foreign demand for American cotton. The AAA set out to raise cotton prices to the pre-war level by reducing the output and pegging the price. But in the second year of its program cotton exports fell 43 per cent below the 1932-33 level. In the last season, before production control began, the world consumed 14,200,000 bales of American cotton compared to 10,200,000 bales of foreign cotton. Last year the consumption figures were almost reversed. The world used 11,300,000 bales of American cotton, and 14,400,000 bales from other countries.

The Farm Board had already proved that large volumes of cotton could not move abroad when prices were pegged above the natural market level. But the AAA paid no attention to its experience. During the last three years, according to the Brookings study, the AAA has prevented the production of about 10,500,000 bales of cotton and raised the price 3 to 4 cents per pound. In spite of that sharp curtailment of output, the Government's holdings of cotton have increased from 2,500,000 to about 6,000,000 bales.

Naturally, the incomes of cotton growers have increased. Henry I. Richards, the author of the Brookings report, estimates the increase in cotton values during the three years of the control program at nearly $300,000,000, aside from benefit payments. But this is not a permanent gain. "Foreign production," he finds, "has been stimulated by the higher cotton prices resulting from our program and will continue for some time to be larger than it would have been if our cotton program had never been undertaken." Cotton production can be increased abroad much more easily than it can be reduced.

If the curtailment program is continued, foreign cotton production will be further stimulated and there will be still greater shrinkage in the world demand for American cotton. When this intense foreign competition forces a change in the American policy, farmers will have to begin paying the piper. In the opinion of the Brookings experts "the total reduction in the income from cotton produced in 1936 and later years seem likely to be considerably greater than the estimated increase in income during the past three seasons, if benefit payments are excluded."

More than two years ago the inevitable result of the cotton program was called to the attention of Secretary Wallace. At that time he did not believe that foreign competition in the world cotton market would become a serious threat. When later events proved his mistake, the Secretary explained the drop in cotton exports as the result of a shortage in dollar exchange. This argument is effectively shattered by the Brookings study.

Cotton exports took their sharpest drop last year, when the total volume of dollar exchange was considerably larger than it had been in 1933-34. There was sufficient dollar exchange to finance a 44 per cent increase in the value of merchandise exports, while cotton markets were stagnant. "Shortage of dollar exchange," to quote once more, "does not, therefore, appear to be a reasonable explanation of more than a small part (if any) of the decline in the volume of cotton exports."

The specific policies discussed in this scientific analysis are no longer in operation. But the renovated AAA is still trying to achieve prosperity for the farmer through the curtailment of crops, with very little regard for incidental effects. Insofar as this study throws the spotlight of intelligent criticism upon the weakness of the curtailment program it will render a service, offsetting the very significant effort of the Black committee to write off all such disclosures as "lobbying."

Fashions In Fiction.

"The dress wasn't exactly an evening dress because it had a funny little collar that came up close about her throat and full, short sleeves; but it was long."

That sentence, excerpted from the current issue of a woman's magazine, was not found in the section devoted to fashions. Nor was it copied from an etiquette article purporting to show what the well-dressed young lady in love should wear. It is simply part of a story, thus providing a very illuminating example of what happens when fashions and fiction meet head-on. For the average woman novelist can no more resist describing her heroine's modes, along with her moods, than she can forego the happy ending.

In the Saturday Review of Literature, the other day, Katharine Fullerton Gerould deplored this tendency on the part of feminine writers to dwell on "description of food, millinery, house-and-table decoration" in their stories. An examination of almost any fiction magazine at hand more than proves the contention that all the bright young things nowadays are concerned with love in lace, tears in tweeds, and frustration in furs. Moreover, these word-clothes are no longer incidental, but generally dominate the scene at the expense of both character and plot.

Margaret Ayer Barnes, Pulitzer Prize winner, interrupts a big moment in a recent story to say of her heroine that "she drew a deep breath that stirred the corsage of orchids on the shawl of her mink coat." Allene Corliss, another regular contributor to magazines, also strives to do fashionably right by her characters, in spite of the perpetual emotion under which they labor. To her, a heartbreak seems secondary to the fact that the girl "was wearing some kind of sheer, stiff frock and a small black hat."

And so it goes. When the Cinderella in modern fiction puts her best foot forward, the sheerness of her hosiery and the cut of her slippers must be fully described. There can be no Sleeping Beauty in up-to-date magazine stories, for the kiss of the Prince would find her negligee shockingly outmoded. The heroine in literature is still wearing her heart on her sleeve, it's true, but now it's the sleeve and not the heart that calls forth the most wordage.

The Two-Job Problem.

The restoration to active duty of Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood is welcomed by all who felt that the punishment meted out for his trenchant but indiscreet criticism of the Administration's relief policies was excessive. However, the general's acceptance of a civilian position as consultant or "efficiency engineer" for a Chicago firm raises the very different question as to the propriety of his combining private employment with official duties.

Since the President, the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff of the Army have offered no objections, it may be assumed that in this particular case the private work is not of a character to interfere with efficient discharge of public duties. Nevertheless, if Gen. Hagood's example were to become a common practice, it would undoubtedly lead to grave abuses in the absence of any precise regulations dealing with matters of this sort. The inconsistency of the practice with the Administration's emphasis on spreading work is also obvious.

For the great majority of Army officers, the moral obligation to give sufficient time to their governmental duties is doubtless adequate protection against the dissipation of their energies. Nevertheless, it is questionable whether the few who are ready to accept pay for outside work should be the judges of the propriety of their own conduct. Certainly strong argument can be made out for requiring advance approval of their plans by superiors.

Regulations may, in fact, be more needed to restrict outside duties that seem otherwise eminently suitable than to prevent acceptance of fees and salaries for work that is obviously improper. There is no doubt about the gross impropriety of an officer connected with the engineering or supply services of the Government taking pay from firms with which he has dealings in his official capacity. Recent unsavory revelations of misconduct in this respect show, however, that such crookedness is severely punished when it becomes known.

While the defense services, by reason of their nature, call for a greater single-mindedness and devotion to official duties than most civilian branches, the problem raised by Gen. Hagood's two jobs is one with which every department of government has to deal. The prolific literary output and the numerous lectures which have supplemented the salaries of many New Deal officials emphasize an evil that had already become quite serious during the Hoover Administration. The abuses of a divided allegiance are not confined to literary circles, moreover; they are found among the lesser subordinates who devote spare time to doing odd jobs which are a poor preparation for the daily routine.

The ramifications of the problem and the many borderline cases of a genuinely perplexing character show that it would be very difficult and probably unwise to pass restrictive laws against holding private jobs while in Government employment. In the absence of such definite prohibitions, however, it is the more essential to emphasize the primary responsibility of the public official to his Government and to see that those who neglect their work for outside interests are effectively disciplined.

Democratic Corporations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the present time when so many careless commentators blame selfish and greedy business men for the depression, it may be in order to call attention to the fact that one of the great business enterprises of the country is thoroughly democratic in its character and mode of operation. The mutual life insurance companies of the United States enjoy the unique distinction of having been founded upon altruistic principles and all their profits or savings go to their own members.

These institutions are, therefore, the greatest of all co-operative enterprises. They are entirely mutual in their organization and operation, providing as they do equal rights for all their members and special privileges to none. As has been well stated by Laflin, "Life insurance as we are familiar with it in America would never have developed except under the influence and inspiration of a democracy." It is true that their boards of trustees are self-perpetuating and at one time one of the larger companies was compelled, at an enormous expense, to comply with the theoretical idea that every policy-holder should have a voice in the selection of trustees. But this experiment proved to be an egregious mistake because policyholders cannot vote understandingly.

The important fact is that these companies, like mutual savings banks, have, as a rule, been managed with absolute fidelity to the best interests of all concerned and in a thoroughly democratic way by a self-perpetuating board of directors or trustees. It is well to give credit where credit is due and particularly in view of malicious attacks by pink propaganda.

Tolerance In Religion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The arguments presented by representatives of religious groups engaged in advocating "tolerance in religion," fail to make an appreciable impression on an intelligent and observing public.

One of these groups, being comparatively few in numbers and satisfied with its own particular sect, is not to be feared. Another group, more numerous and aggressive, has never been regarded as tolerant when having unlimited power. The remaining group is the most tolerant—so tolerant, indeed, as to have allowed itself in overpopulous centers to be out-voted, and, to a greater or less extent, overcome and compelled to submit to European ideas both in politics and religion. Happily, however, in the greater part of this wonderful country of ours American ideas and ideals still prevail.

The great soothing influence in the matter of religious tolerance lies not in appeals on religious grounds, but on a free, non-sectarian public school system of education, where children of all religious faiths can meet on common ground, unhampered by religious prejudices. As long as children are under ecclesiastical influence only, their minds cannot expand sufficiently to enable them to be tolerant in later years. Tolerance does not proceed from dogmas and "exclusive" creeds, but from an untrammeled and enlightened conscience.

Problems Of The Merchant Marine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Failure of Congress to place the American merchant marine in a position to go ahead, with assurance as to the future policy of the Government, prejudices the recovery and development of American foreign trade. This uncertainty, unless settled at this session of Congress, threatens to force the abandonment of many valuable trade routes and services and may again place American shippers at the mercy of foreign flag rates and services.

Faced with a world-wide shrinkage in foreign trade and an unstable Government policy, American shipowners suffered heavy losses during the depression. However, every trade route has been maintained and a substantial fleet of new ships built. Since 1933 they have steadily improved their operating organization and ship personnel, despite the imminent threat of repudiation by the Government of the mail contracts offered to induce private enterprise to purchase and operate the commercially useful vessels of the Government-owned fleet and build new tonnage.

The record of American shipowners during this period is a tribute to the aggressiveness and courage of American business. With an average reduction in 1933-35, as compared to 1930, of 59 per cent in value and approximately one-third in volume of American foreign water-borne commerce, our mercantile fleet met the keenest competition of foreign flag lines and increased the percentage of the tonnage moved in American ships. Since 1929 we have built for ocean trade 366,133 gross tons, exclusive of tankers, of the most modern vessels afloat and have reconstructed 42 ships.

While this record is due in part to financial co-operation extended under the merchant marine act of 1928, it also represents a private investment to date of approximately $69,000,000 for new ship construction and deferred obligations of $75,500,000. In addition, $15,000,000 of private capital has been spent or obligated for reconditioning.

Recently the Senate refused to appropriate funds requested by the Postoffice Department and the Bureau of the Budget and voted by the House for annual ocean mail pay, amounting to approximately $26,000,000 annually. These mail contracts were intended to offset lower ship construction and operation costs of foreign lines and to compensate for the added cost of making the ships suitable for conversion as naval auxiliaries in time of war.

Never has there been a period of such confusion as to the future policy of Congress. Shipowners have been harassed with investigations and accusations of fraud, yet the alleged guilty have not been segregated and the entire industry has been handicapped. Even if new legislation, as proposed by President Roosevelt, is enacted, it would still require at least a year before the present mail contracts could be eliminated and other contracts substituted. This involves the readjustment of 43 present contracts after a careful study of the detailed costs of foreign services.

The appropriation under which these services are maintained will be exhausted July 1. Without the funds carried by the House bill, many important lines will be forced to discontinue operations. Such an occurrence, even of temporary duration, would be destructive to American business and prestige and would disrupt our foreign trade.

The immediate need of American shipping is freedom to devote its undivided attention to serving and developing foreign markets and to the construction of new tonnage comparable with the fleets of our leading maritime competitors. Congress should provide for the continuance of our present merchant lines and then give prompt attention to Senate bill 3500, which has been favorably reported. This bill appears to offer a means of establishing the American merchant marine on a stable and permanent basis and to carry the reform suggested by the President.

Vandalism In The Parks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hope these remarks banged out on the portable by a "furriner" passin' thru won't be out of order. You're having the same "park trouble" that afflicted my city some years ago. "Much needed rejuvenation" they called it, and chose two widely popular spots for guinea pigs. The gang in power was surprised by an inadvertent "surplus." The coin burned pockets and itched palms.

The corps of "architects and engineers" would have flattered Boulder Dam or a big boondoggling project. Doomed parks took on appearance of a hotly contested spot in the Argonne. One civic club in a swanky suburb "endorsed" the changes, but affected citizens howled before and during "improvements." Brass hats sprang the horse laugh, hinted they'd benefit the dumb dubs in spite of themselves.

I won't deny the work was technically excellent, wide walks, gadgets, fancy shrubs, regimented trees in place of (sound) forest trees, and not the least the iron "forbidden" signs. Yet the parks wore a "killed" look. Dehumanized, flat and flabby, hot-house, if you get me. Never the same again. You'll get what I mean after they "finish" your parks.

The dubs passed up the new glories or sought more distant parks. Kids preferred the streets and alleys. The debt sinking fund eaten into, the "machine" has steam-rollered no other parks, or barked about the new and better order. The park committee politicians, you see, got plenty of air at election.

I think this skeleton account illustrates both the disadvantages and benefits of voice in politics. I sympathize with the problem here

Sees Flying A Folly.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without quibble, qualification, sympathy or justification to my mind, one of the greatest evils and tragedies of this our modern age is the invention and operation of flying machines. Their evil and harm far exceeds any little good they might at times be capable of.

If there could be a greater tragedy of this modern age, it is in the fact that the "death machines" have taught an intelligent people but little from past experiences of their death-dealing potentialities. Never have I been impressed by them, nor am I as yet, and my great aversion increases daily as I read of the smash-ups in the newspapers caused and promulgated by a money-making force that has as its recompense a few airy thrills and then—sudden death.

Knute Rockne, Senator Cutting, Will Rogers, Wiley Post and many others would be with us today had it not been for horrifying, useless and shocking deaths caused by planes. My conversation and experience with people has taught me that very few ever sense the danger of aviation or learn any lesson whatsoever from its fatalities.

To my mind, this aviation business, transportation and pleasure flying is the height of folly and absurdity. Every one who continues this folly always pays and pays dearly.

Fauntleroy's Curls.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to give my own opinion as to how Little Lord Fountleroy should be pictured. I have read the book and therefore feel he should be dressed in velvet suits with curls as described in the book.

Really, Freddie Bartholomew is an ideal boy to play this part, but I believe he should have golden locks and lovely velvet suits of rich, dark colors, with lace collars and cuffs as the typical old-fashioned, princely English lads were. His dress would not necessarily keep him from being a manly little fellow.

The Post Impressionist

The Pride Of The Garden.

Post Office, Thursday.

NOW that spring is here, adding the faint perfume of budding garlic to the balmy breeze, we receive more and more approval of our modest plea for a little Allium sativum in the salad. To be sure, Miss Jeanette MacDonald has written again from Motion-Picture Land to protest our taste for this species of lily, but even that lovely lady's lovely voice fails to move our stancher allies—at least upon this issue.

Thus Rheta Childe Dorr, well-known among the magazines, sends us a note:

"I read your Column daily—we are heart-to-heart on the garlic question."

Comes also H. B. Hastings, another of our faithful readers:

"I suppose," he supposes, "that you had no intention of publishing an exhaustive article on garlic, else you would have cited Numbers XI:5. But perhaps this item has escaped you." And "this item" is a United Press dispatch from Placerville, Calif.—the very State in which Miss MacDonald lives—and it substantiates forever all our contention about the beneficial effects of garlic.

It declares:

"Frank Coster, of Portugese origin, who has just celebrated his hundredth birthday, attributes his longevity to the same food favored by his father, who died at a hundred and twenty-seven years—garlic and onions."

* * *

Appeals for our own garlic-bearing, salad-perscription are more than plentiful, but these must remain unsatisfied. We steadfastly refuse to disclose our formula to an unappreciative world. However, we have no scruples against giving the formula of that delightful dancer, Lisa Gardiner—even though it be an excellent one.

She writes to the Column:

"Like Taffy, I have, of course, a recipe of my own, even to 'putting in the oil first and the vinegar afterward.'"

She strikes a perfect note at the very start. "The first thing," says she, "is to have a proper bowl A wooden one is suitable, but I use one of gold medallion ware, because its rough surface scrapes the garlic so well. Bowls of glass and crystal are suitable only for that gastronomic error, a 'fruit salad.'"

* * *

And we applaud her taste in oil: "The bowl having been well rubbed with a clove of garlic, salt is put in, dry mustard, black pepper and paprika. After these are well stirred, about three tablespoonfuls of olive oil are added: I use the Spanish crude oil because it has more flavor. A scant tablespoon of tarragon vinegar comes next—and thereupon a still more thorough stirring.

"That's the base of the dressing. Sometimes I add a pinch of dried tarragon and a little basil or thyme, or all three."

* * *

"For the salad itself, one must have real lettuce, not the iceburg variety, chicory or escarole, with perhaps some endive.

"When the salad is just about ready, I put in a little onion, chopped fine—or chives, if I have them—and then toss the whole thing until all the leaves are well coated with the dressing. I do this just before serving, so that the salad may not be wilted. If I have guests, I sometimes add a little Roquefort—and sometimes I add the Roquefort anyway.

"But the main thing is to have good oil and plenty of seasoning. The great fault of much American cooking is the lack of seasoning!

"Very few dishes are not improved by adding a little garlic or onion. Many women, I find, object to both—if they are told about them. But many of these same women will comment upon the delicious flavor of a dish, when uninformed of the garlic menace lurking therein.

* * *

And if Hollywood remains firm against garlic, after that, "I suggest," concludes Miss Gardiner, "the substitution of a few pearls, well ground—I am told that they do not dissolve in vinegar."

P. S.:

About Mr. Hastings' Biblical reference. We take it for granted that you are perfectly familiar with the verse to which he refers—but we publish it by way of completing our record.

It has to do with the murmuring of the Children of Israel during their wanderings in the wilderness. About the time of the burning of Taberah, they came to Moses and complained of their food. They said:

"We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic."

Fair Enough

The Envy Of Nations.

It might surprise some of us to hear that, for all our troubles in this country, the United States enjoys the envy of every nation in Europe with the exception of Great Britain, which is now in the throes of a boom, and that millions of people would leap at a chance to come over and share our poverty with us.

The British seem not to envy anybody, for they have plenty of money and confidence and their national spirit is strong, being unaffected by their partisan political grudges and ambitions. They are in the money now, and they have the rare good sense to realize that they are having a good time, and, furthermore, they are pleased to know that both Italy and Germany look up to Great Britain as a superior nation.

Of course, it burns the proud Fascist or Nazi to be told that he holds his country inferior to any land on earth, but they are constantly revealing their sense of inferiority in their censored newspapers and in the public orations of their bosses. The only difference between them in this respect is that the Fascist leaders preach hatred for Britain, whereas Hitler fawns upon the British government, tries to imitate British manners and is constantly telling his subjects that they are as good as the British in this or that pursuit, from rowing or skating to manufacturing.

Mussolini showed what was in his heart when he kept Anthony Eden waiting 35 minutes in the anteroom to his office and then met him with a petulant cry that England could not treat Italy as a nation of barefoot savages any more. Not only that, but he saw to it that the incident was communicated to his Black Shirts to be gossiped around Rome and spread from Rome throughout the country.

Italy was as good as England now, but the aching envy of England, the yearning to be as great and strong was plain in the bearing of every bright-eyed Black Shirt as he beat his chest and re-enacted Mussolini's defiance of the beautiful and precocious young diplomat from London.

The Nazis' feeling of inferiority was never more clearly portrayed than in the pathetic bombast with which their captive journalists exploited petty athletic victories or explained away unimportant failures in the so-called winter Olympic Games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen. After all, in any nation which actually feels itself to be great and strong, a winning performance on skates, skiis or bobsled is not to be reckoned as a glorious achievement.

* * * *

The Americans, for example, have been producing great athletes for many years and their triumphs in international competition have become so commonplace that American sports writers long ago ceased to wave the flag, and turned instead to exploiting the intelligence of certain of our super-athletes. Had the Americans won the winter Olympics that would have been an oft-told story, so when they made a poor showing this year that was news.

But I began to report a great envy of the United States, discernible even in France, where the love of country is fierce but where every man and woman is constantly aware of the menace which blows from the eastern frontier like a cold wind. Germany is always there. Hitler has proclaimed that France is an enemy and must be destroyed, and the air line from the front is shorter than it was in the old days. So, inevitably, some day, the bombs will fall.

* * * *

This country rubs borders with no hostile neighbor, and that is a condition which no continental nation enjoys. Frenchman and German man the frontier, constantly watching for a warlike move. The Pole and Russian eye each other across an imaginary line with hatred and suspicion, and the Czech knows that Hitler awaits the day when he will turn loose the guns and planes, pinch off Czechoslovakia, snuff out the hard-won freedom of the people, suppress their language and massacre the dissenters.

It is hard for continental Europeans to understand the American discontent and impossible for them to realize that poverty can exist in a land so blessed with what it takes to live well and protect itself. Coal, butter, eggs, meat, wheat, oil, iron, power, factories of every conceivable kind, money and goods of every kind which they have not we have in the United States, and some things in such vast abundance that the Nation pays the farmers to neglect their fields and destroy their pigs, and economists decry machines which replace human hands and produce too much.

The Exile Of Calles

Mexico Wonders At Sudden Expulsion Of Former President, Marking Victory Of Questionable Legality For Cardenas.

By Jeffrey Paul.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City, April 15.

Mexico is still a bit dazed by the amazing action of the Cardenas government in bundling Gen. Plutarcho Elias Calles aboard a plane and shipping him to Brownsville, Tex. The swiftness with which the former president and his friends, Luis Morones, Luis Leon, and Melchor Ortega, were whisked out of the country has left public opinion confused, but tending to shape along lines that may be summed up as pro and anti-Cardenas rather than as pro-Cardenas and pro-Calles.

Mixed feelings toward Calles are noted among the masses of the people. Many remember nothing but his bitter anti-religious campaign, his ruthless elimination of political opponents, and his coterie of friends who, following the leader's example, built up huge fortunes while they forgot their slogan of making Mexico a better place to live in. Others, looking deeper, wonder if Cardenas did not make a serious mistake in putting the Sonoran where he cannot be watched.

* * * *

Labor, of course, is generally favorable to the move, if labor is to be considered as only those workers organized and dominated by Lombardo Toledano. With the fall of his one-time chief, CROM leader Morones, Toledano emerges as the outstanding labor leader in the country. He is doubly strong because Cardenas seems greatly influenced by his ideas and opinions. Toledano's scathing, ruthless denunciation of Calles and all his works, made in front of the National Palace on Sunday morning, had in it that note of triumph which comes only when a man scents victory and expands his chest in its dazzling rays. The exile of Calles and Morones has "made" Toledano.

No general statement has been forthcoming from business elements. But the truth is that they must wage their battles against socialism, communism, or just plain radicalism without the support of one of the most conservative elements in the country—the Calles millionaires, one-time radicals who flip-flopped when money came their way. It remains to be seen if the Cardenas leaders will themselves fall under the golden sway of graft, labor salaries, greed for land, and other means of making money from their positions.

There has been no indication of how churchmen, either as a body or speaking as individuals, feel about the situation. Undoubtedly, there are many who see poetic justice in the airplane exile of the man who so fiercely persecuted the church when he was in the heyday of his power. They have not forgotten that the "air route" was Calles' favorite way of exiling prelates, among them the apostolic delegate, Archbishop Ruiz y Flores, now residing in San Antonio, Tex. Certainly the ex-dictator can count on little sympathy from those whose life-calling he prescribed as something akin to crime. They may pity him, but they would never support him in any way.

Cardenas has received many expressions of adhesion to his program and to his action against Calles. His greatest strength probably lies in the support of Portes Gil, all-powerful with the peasant organizations at this writing; Toledano, leader of the largest worker group; and Saturnino Cedillo, Minister of Agriculture, considered an outstanding personality because of his strength in rich and important San Luis Potosi. Diverse groups and organizations of workers, peasants and professional people have wired approval and support, such messages coming from distant Durango and Nuevo Leon in the north, and Yucatan and Guerrero in the south.

* * * *

That is one side of the picture, and it is generally pro-Cardenas. The anti-Cardenas sentiment is so mixed with the little pro-Calles support left in the country that it is rather difficult to distinguish the separate currents. However, this mingled feeling may be summed up as follows:

There is no question that the expulsion was illegal and that Cardenas, who professes great respect for the constitution, violated the provision which declares that no Mexican may be exiled from the country, no matter what the charge. Because Calles expelled political opponents in his time is no defense. The present incumbent has made a fetish of the constitution and clearly violated it by acting as he did.

That the administration and its supporters recognize this fact is strikingly evident in the masked defense which Toledano made of it in his speech last Sunday. He declared that from the juridical, national, revolutionary and moral points of view, no laws had been violated. In order to justify the fact, however, he projected an interpretation of the law in words which deny to those opposed to the present regime the full protection of the constitution and other laws. He said:

No one in Mexico can invoke the rights of man by which his liberty is respected simply because he is a man. This is an anti-revolutionary interpretation. He has a right to claim protection, he has a right to claim his prerogatives in accordance with the letter of the law, but only when he is not opposed to the revolution or opposed to the collective interest. No one can invoke the law when he has violated, not only the law, but his own promises. No one has the right to invoke order when he himself has introduced disorder, nor to invoke the tranquility of the home when there are thousands without homes.

* * * *

Such an interpretation is far from democratic, republican, or just. Despite Toledano's words, no proof has been advanced that Calles or his associates were directly responsible for strikes, riots, dynamitings, or the blowing up of the Vera Cruz train which precipitated the crisis. Calles has said that there is anarchy in Mexico; Toledano blames him for it; Portes Gil denies that there is anarchy. The evidence shows that the labor pressure, coupled with the badly interpreted socialistic education program, have had a large share in creating whatever anarchy reigns in Mexico today.

If Calles and his group were guilty of the acts charged against them, why were they not haled into court and made to stand trial? That is the question many are asking. It is an issue not yet faced by Cardenas or Toledano or Portes Gil. Until it is answered, the exile of the "sinister gang," as they have been called, must continue to be laid to a plan to rid the country of their presence because they constituted obstacles to the ambitions of Toledano and Gil. These ambitions were somewhat curtailed by the activities of Morones' CROM organization, to which Calles apparently gave his silent support.

If he never knew it before, Calles has now learned the lesson of loneliness, the desertion of friends who once fawned upon him. Portes Gil, turning a tribute to Emiliano Zapata, revolutionary hero of the agrarians, into an attack on Calles, declared "I never was an instrument of Calles." Calles may have smiled when he read that; Mexico guffawed. Toledano mocked the fallen one in bitter words, warning that "God would not bring him back to Mexico. If He did, the proletariat would meet him." The cup of bitterness for Calles, which began to fill in June, has now brimmed over.

* * * *

Today, as Calles rests in California, no one can predict either his future or the future of Mexico. The Sonoran is past 60. Men in Mexico are clamoring for his lands, demanding that he be stripped of his generalcy, naming him traitor, reactionary, betrayer of the proletariat. His chances of returning, either as a private citizen or as head of an armed revolt, appear very slim. His rise was slow, labored, well-planned. His fall, coming in a series of dramatic flashes, has been meteoric. Only time will answer the question: "Can Calles come back?"

Mexico, all reports say, is quiet. There has been no news of armed movements, of popular outcry against administration measures. Radicalism, call it extreme proletarianism, mistaken socialism or incipient communism, has won a victory over a conservative section that had its roots in the revolution itself. Cardenas, Toledano, Portes Gil, and to some extent Cedillo, are the Mexican government today, free, unfettered, no longer menaced by the recluse of Santa Barbara. Theirs is the next move in Mexico's checkered political life.

Italian Flier Killed.

Genoa, Italy, April 15 (AP).—Maj. Enea Recagno, one of the Italian pilots who made the Rome-Chicago mass flight in 1933, was killed today when the amphibian plane he was piloting crashed at the airdrome here. The cause of the accident was not determined.

Becoming Fame

By Karl Schrittgiesser

Plodding For Gadgets.

The country still is filled with long-haired wild men who spend hours in their cellars tinkering with gadgets which they hope some day will bring them fame and fortune. Because of these strange creatures, Washington office buildings are crowded with patent attorneys. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that, next to clerks of Government, patent attorneys make up the largest social class in the National Capital.

Business is beginning to get better for the patent attorneys, I am told by one who represents at least three of the largest industrial organizations in the country. Not only are the big companies seeking new patents for new machines, which calls for less and less men to run them, but the perpetual motion cranks are pepping up, also.

According to my informant, who comes from a long line of patent attorneys, life would be sweet and pleasant if it weren't for perpetual motion. In the first place should you, after a long and misspent life in the laboratory and library, discover the secret of perpetual motion, you would probably die just as poor as you are now. For even if you had it perfected to the last degree, you couldn't patent it. That's one thing, or theory, or system, or what have you, that the Patent Office perpetually frowns upon.

The Patent Office has a word for it. Such requests for patents are marked "inopportunitive" and rejected. Mayme some day the Patent Office will regret this snobbishness, just as now it gets a little red in the face when some cynic recalls that it said the same thing about heavier-than-air flying machines years ago when the first airplane patent was applied for. The nearest approach to perpetual motion perhaps ever discovered is the so-called first 'delco" single unit system, I am told. That was patented and reaped its inventor plenty of money.

* * * *

Some cranky ideas get by and are patented because in the application for a patent there is no mention of perpetual motion. Instead the invention is described merely as something to do with a sewing machine, or an automobile, or something like that. Only the inventor knows that it will, some day, revolutionize the whole world. The only reason, he knows deep in his heart, that it doesn't make him an immediate fortune is that the world is not yet enough advanced to appreciate his life work.

The poor inventor, hugging his patented secret close to his heart, recalls that in 1901 Clyde J. Coleman had patented a system like "delcolight" but the country wasn't ready for it until Charles F. Kettering reached similar inventive conclusions nine years later.

A patent is good only for 17 years, as the original inventor of Eskimo pie, that abysmal concoction of ice cream and chocolate candy, well knows. Having had his idea, that peculair genius got it patented, and, until it ran out, be alone profited from the pennies of high school boys and girls. At the end of his patent's life it became, as I understand it, more or less common property, because at the expiration of the 17 years a wise government believes that whatever has been invented—whether radio or Eskimo pie—is then just another addition to the "sum of human knowledge."

I asked this patent attorney if "pure knowledge" can be patented.

"No more than an idea can be copyrighted," he said.

So I immediately abandoned that new system of mathematics upon which I have been working secretly all these years.

* * * *

Through the hands of the patent attorneys run all sorts of weird ideas, gadgets and machines. Some of them, if they come at the psychological moment, bring personal fortunes to their inventors, but most of the really worthwhile technical changes come from scientists in the pay of corporations, who are forever engaged in finding new ways to do the old things at greater profits for the owners.

I asked this attorney friend if he did not think that perhaps the great unemployment situation might be alleviated if science laid off for a decade. But he scoffed and said, "The new industries will balance the loss of work brought about by the new inventions." Having often read that in 1929 in the Saturday Evening Post, I said no more.

Florida Canal, Quoddy Works Are Abandoned

President Drops Programs Opposed by Congress; May Be Modified.

this need an auxiliary power station, to cost probably $3,000,000, would have to be constructed, jumping the total cost nearer $40,000,000. About $8,000,000 has been spent thus far and the project was hitting high gear this month.

Other practical difficulties facing engineers in constructing a hydro-electric plant include the problem of salt water corrosion, never before faced by electric engineers. It is not known how metals will endure under salt water submersion and tests have not solved this yet. The other difficulty is more a political one, it has been pointed out, since observers hold that Maine will go overwhelmingly Republican in November and thus block in the State Legislature any moves to set up the necessary Quoddy power authority.

The chief objection of all, however, is that refered to, the question of who will hse the vast power generated at the huge initial expense. No one yet knows definitely what industries, or how many, wohld be attracted to the farthest northeast tip of the United States by cheap power.

Ship Canal Assailed.

The Florida Ship Canal has been even more heavily and heartily assailed by critics than the Quoddy project.

The plan was to dig a 206-mile canal for ocean-going vessels across northern Florida from Jacksonville to the gulf. Many sources insisted there was no reason for the canal, as many ship lines operating in the area assert their ships would not use it. Jacksonville interests have been plugging the plan for many years. It was once presented by a private concern to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, where it was rejected.

Last summer the plan reached President Roosevelt, and he approved it by executive order, allotting the project $5,000,000 out of the $4,000,000,000 work relief moneys. The eventual cost, even conservatively figured, would have been from $140,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Refused as PWA Project.

This action of the President came after Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes had twice turned down the project for PWA for various reasons.

The original $5,000,000 for the canal is nearly exhausted, it is understood, while the Quoddy project will be able to continue till about June.

The abandonment of the canal in particular was looked on as a vindication of the vigorous battle against it carried on by Senator Arthur W. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who introduced a resolution to call a halt on the project. At hearings, Secretary Ickes repeated his opposition to the project; Gen. Markham, of the War Department, testified that work had been started without a final report from his men, "under orders" from a superior authority; and Senator Vandenberg introduced letters from 28 potential canal-users who regarded the canal without favor. Nine of these had been listed by the War Department, incidentally, as favoring the project.

Georgians Set Primary June 3, Require $10,000 Entrance Fee

State Democratic Committee Defeats Roosevelt Supporters' Move for Election on May 5; New Deal Must Pay Cost, Says Member.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 15.—Overriding wishes of President Roosevelt's followers for an earlier date, the Georgia State Democratic executive committee, dominated by his critic, Gov. Eugene Talmadge, today set a Presidential primary for June 3 and fixed the entrance fee at $10,000 for each candidate.

The committee voted down 83 to 11 a substitute move of the Roosevelt supporters which would have fixed the primary date for May 5 and the entrance fee at $1,000.

Will Mann, leader of the Talmadge majority on the committee, said that if there is only one candidate—as Newt Morris, the Roosevelt leader, predicted—the entrance fee would be handed back to that candidate within three minutes after entries close May 16 at noon.

"Somebody has got to pay for the primary," Mann continued, "the New Dealers have plenty of money to pay for the primary and that's the only way they are going to get it done."

Gov. Talmadge, who did not attend the committee meeting, said immediately after its adjournment he did not know whether he would be a candidate in the primary.

"I don't know if I'll enter the primary," he said.

"I am pretty busy with State affairs right now. My future action depends on how things turn out in Georgia."

The primary resolution said that if only one candidate qualified he will name the delegates and alternates to the national convention at Philadelphia and shall be entitled to the vote of Georgia there.

Marion Allen, Georgia manager for Roosevelt, and over a score of county executive committees had sought a primary.

Morris said the June date was too close to the national convention date, June 23, to permit consolidation and tabulation of the primary vote.

The primary will be held under the usual county unit system of voting. Under it each county has double the number of unit votes that it has representatives in the State House of Representatives. There are 159 counties and 410 unit votes in Georgia. The candidate receiving a plurality of popular votes captures the unit vote of the county.

Gold Ore at $4.20 a Ton Is Just Gilt to Owner

New York, April 15 (U.P.).—Walter Muller was digging a foundation for a new front porch at his home in Queens when he saw a glint in the sandy soil. He took a chunk to a jewler, who told him it was gold ore. For a $10 fee, an assay office verified this, and added the further information the gold would run about $4.20 a ton. Muller decided to go ahead and build his porch.

property without due process of law, as guaranteed by the Constitution.

"There always have been from the earliest the poor and unfortunate whom the State has had to support by means of money raised by taxation," Judge Crane said.

"Instead of solely taxing all the people directly, it (the Legislature) has passed a law whereby employers are taxed for the help of the unemployed, the sums thus paid being cast upon the public generally through the natural increase in the price of commodities.

"Whether relief be under this new law of the Legislature or under the dole, the public at large pays the bill."

In the dissenting opinion, Judge Hubbs raised the point that in order to draw benefits a worker does not have to suffer involuntary unemployment.

"One who voluntarily leaves employment or is discharged for valid cause still may be entitled to benefits," he said.

The Once Over

The Patriotic Home Builder.

("Poets are asked by the head of a big construction company to glorify the home as a means of helping the building industry and aiding in the restoration of prosperity."—News item.)

I.
I feel the urge to build a home—
A new one (strictly fresh);
A home where all the gadgets merge
And all the comforts mesh.
A home! Ah, how it stirs my heart—
How much it means to me!—
And what a comfort homes are to
The building industry!

II.
I must construct myself a house
With great big fireplace
Where I can stretch and have my ease
Far from the dizzy pace;
What joy to know the comforts of
Each cranny and each room (Exclusive of the comforts of
A major building boom!)

III.
I want a house beside a brook,
Where field and stream are met,
Although I'll compromise and take Whatever I can get;
I want to hear the birdies sing
And chirp the whole day thru—
And what a treat all day to hear
The builders singing, too!

IV.
A beechnut tree upon my lawn—
Perhaps a rustic gate—
A putting green behind the house—
How wonderful! How great!
I want to fish in my own brook
With my own garden worms;
It means so much to me . . . and to
The big construction firms!

V.
I think I'll have to buy a cat—
Some kittens would be swell;
They'll be a comfort to me and
The cat business as well.
To hear the greeting of a dog—
To see its stub tail shake!
I'll order me a dog today—
The pet stores need a break!

VI.
I ought to buy some goldfish, too—
They're nice to have about,
And I am more than glad to help
The goldfish tradesmen out.
Some lovebirds? Yes, I'll take a pair
And let them with me roost;
The lovebird industry is low
And it can stand a boost!

VII.
A fellow dutiful am I
Of patriotic trend;
I rally quickly to a cause
And serve it well, no end;
I have a lot of houses now
But just one more I'll start;
Boy, order me another home—
I wanna do my part!

The Real Issues.

The baseball season is on and the questions, "But how are we gonna escape inflation?" and "What about the Constitution?" definitely give way to "Why didn't he take a longer lead off second? and "Yeah, but outside of a fast one, what's he got?"

The President threw out the first ball in Washington, but the Democrats still think it could be done by the electric power from some great chain of waterfalls, dams and harnessed tides.

Tactics.

It is understood that President Roosevelt will not make many speeches in this campaign. He thinks his chances will be better if he lets Mr. Hoover continue to do most of the speaking.

Menuhin to Rest at Cost Of $100,000 Per Year

San Francisco, April 15 (AP).—A tall, blond musician with a pleasant smile and polished manner arrived here today to begin an indefinite vacation in the sunny Los Gatos hills which will cost him $100,000 a year.

Yehudi Menuhin, Jewish violinist, at 19 is earning at least that much, but he and his remarkable family are agreed it is a good thing to stop for awhile. After all, 110 concerts in 73 cities within 16 months make pretty strenuous living. "I'm going to be outdoors most of the time," said the youth. "I want to live a normal life for awhile."

Thursday and Friday
April 16 and 17—Eight to Ten

NO GOODS will be sold—but you will have opportunity to study the evolution of the four centuries of design in furniture which influences good form today—doing it under exceptional conditions. Each of the historical and popular periods is authentically presented in a setting that is consistently correct in every detail.

This exhibit is designed to create an intimate knowledge of the characteristic motifs of each of the great master designers and foster discriminating care in selection and combinations. Not only true to the originals in design, but faithful as well in the woods utilized in their development. Conspicuous for their absence are the "substitute woods" which have come into modern use under the mistaken guise of "economy" at the sacrifice of quality and charm.

The Sloane Company of Mastercraftsmen and Sloane prevailing prices give contradiction to this fallacy.

We're expecting you tonight or Friday—and you'll enjoy the unique exhibit, we are confident.

$10,000 Reward for Record Haul Goes Begging After Disappearance of Package More Than Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 15.—Nearly $1,000,000 worth of United States Treasury notes, part of a gigantic haul taken from a bank messenger more than a year ago, matured today in the hands of a thief or band of thieves, while a $10,000 reward went begging.

Insurance companies which posted the reward extended the deadline until tomorrow noon, however.

They hoped by then that some clew to the whereabouts of the notes might turn up, but recalled that today's deadline had been extended from last December 15.

The notes which reached maturity totaled $950,000 plus interest. They wede part of the loot taken from Morris Blossfield, 55, a messenger, on January 28, 1935, totaling in all $1,450,000.

A quarter of a million dollars worth matured last December. The remainder will be called at dates many years hence.

Banks, dealers and Government agencies throughout the country have been repeatedly notified of the serial numbers.

Eight of those which matured today were for $100,000 each, 5 were for $10,000, 19 for $5,000 and 5 for $1,000.

The Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation declined to comment on the case.

Blossfeld, a messenger employed 15 years by the Bank of Manhattan, was quoted at the time as saying that he had placed the packet of notes on a counter ledge, and that when he looked around, the securities had vanished.

Shaft Sunk to Aid 3 Trapped in Mine

Moose River, Nova Scotia, April 15 (AP).—Provincial mining officials, clinging to a faint hope of rescuing three Toronto men trapped since Sunday in the Moose River gold mine, began a new approach tonight.

A vertical shaft was begun through 20 feet of solid rock in the hope of meeting a sloping shaft at a level unaffected by cave-ins which have already halted work three times.

The victims of the cave-in Sunday are Dr. D. E. Robertson, well-known surgeon; H. B. Magill, attorney, who owned the mine, and Alfred Scadding, timekeeper.

Rescue workers, however, hoped to reach the 141-foot level of the mine before the three die from exposure, hunger and thirst—if they still live.

Another threatened cave-in late today forced miners temporarily to flee from the shaft they had been drilling.

Two men have been injured in efforts to bring a 28-ton crane here over a rough country road.

Grocer Shot by Bandit In Critical Condition

Irving Kagod, 2601 Sherman avenue northwest, proprietor of a grocery store, clung to his life last night in Garfield Hospital after doctors removed a bullet from his stomach.

Kagod was shot and critically wounded Tuesday night when he grappled with a Negro bandit. The gunman fired and fled when the grocer resisted.

Physicians at the hospital yesterday said Kagod's condition was still critical, but that he had an even chance to recover.

Aid of U. S. Defends Copyright Treaty

By the Associated Press.

A State Department representative yesterday denied an assertion by Nathan Burkan, counsel for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, that adherence to the Berne Copyright Convention would encourage "dumping" of foreign works in this country.

Their disagreement marked the concluding session of hearings conducted by the House Patents Committee on legislation to revise the 1909 copyright law.

Dr. Wallace McClure, of the State Department, urged adherence to the Berne convention, as provided in the proposed legislation. The convention provides automatic copyrights in all signatory nations. Dr. McClure said the United States, by participating, would be in a position to block objectionable features and advocate a favorable program.

Army Rules Allow Hagood's Extra Job

By the Associated Press.

War Department officials said yesterday there is nothing in Army regulations to prevent Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood from accepting an advisory position with a mail order house as long as such work does not interfere with his official Army tasks.

Hagood said in Chicago on Tuesday that in addition to his command of the Sixth Army Corps Area he would act as an efficiency engineer for a private business concern.

Army officers said commissioned personnel often do outside work for remuneration, such as writing for publication, lecturing and coaching. It was said that a decision as to whether such outside employment would not be inconsistent with Army duties rested upon Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff.

Spanish Deputies Stage Fist Fight

Madrid, April 15 (AP).—Rightist and Leftist deputies engaged in a fist fight in the Spanish Parliament tonight.

Ramon Gonzalez Pena, a Socialist deputy, who was given clemency after being sentenced to death for participation in the rebellion of October, 1934, was one of those who engaged in the combat, which follower Leftist charges against the Rightists in connection with the revolt.

The Parliament earlier had heard Premier Manule Azana vigorously deny that Spain is heading for Communism, as he replied to monarchist charges that the Leftist government is "standing idly by while Communists are carrying out a program to implant the Soviet regime."

The fighting occurred after Jose Diaz Ramos, a Communist, made declarations intimating that Jose Maria Gil Robles, Rightist leader and Minister of War in the former government of Premier Alejandro Lerroux, was at least partly responsible for the killing of a Dr. Vasquez after a court-martial which grew out of the revolution.

Dr. Woods to Lecture.

A lecture for the benefit of a memorial to the late Dr. Harold Golder, former dean of the Graduate School of American University, will be delivered tonight at Hurst Hall on the university's campus by Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the College of Liberal Arts. His subject will be "Parodies in English Poetry."

Bus Speed-Up In Crash Fatal To 14 Related

Slowed, Then 'Shot Ahead,' Fireman Testifies in Damages Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., April 15.—James A. Shewbridge, Baltimore & Ohio engineer, testified today that he had blown the whistle of his locomotive and the bell was ringing a few seconds before the engine struck a school bus at the Rockville grade crossing last year.

Shewbridge was testifying for the defendants in the first of 18 damage suits arising out of the bus-train crash which killed 14 school children. About six witnesses remained to be heard when court adjourned today. The case is expected to go to the jury tomorrow.

View Obscured.

The engineer said he did not have a very clear view of the crossing because the night was misty. His fireman, William F. Bussey, of Glen Burnie, called to him that there was a bus on the crossing. He said he applied his brakes and brought the train to a halt as quickly as possible.

The railroad company, co-defendant with the owner of the bus in the suits, totaling $400,000, also called Bussey as a witness.

Bussey told the jury that the bus slowed down as it neared the crossing and then "shot ahead" on to the tracks.

Bussey said that he had his head out of his window from the time the train left Gaithersburg, six miles from Rockville. Near the crossing, at the regular whistle post, the engineer, James Shewbridge, sounded the whistle, Bussey said.

Saw Lights of Bus.

He estimated he was 1,400 feet from the crossing when he saw the lights of the bus shining through the thin rain. This was shortly after 11 p. m. At the time he saw the bus, he said, it was making between 25 and 30 miles an hour. Then it slowed down.

"I thought he (Percy Lines, the bus driver) would stop," Bussey told the jury. "All at once he shot ahead — right at the westbound tracks."

Bussey said he did not see any automobile except the bus cross the tracks shortly before the accident. At the inquest held in Rockville last year a golf professional testified he had crossed the tracks, going in the opposite direction from the bus, a few minutes before the crash. He said he stopped his car when the bus passed him because he knew the train was coming and wondered if the bus could cross safely.

'Future Veterans' Seek Preference for Jobs

Princeton, N. J., April 15 (AP).—The national executive council of the Veterans of Future Wars issued a manifesto tonight calling upon all legislative bodies to enact laws giving members of the organization preference in civil service classification and in the allotment of jobs.

Lewis J. Gorin, Princeton junior and national commander of the future war vets, said a lobby probably would be established at the New Jersey State House in Trenton next week to seek passage of "preferential" legislation.

He said copies of the manifesto would be sent out to the 265 future vets' posts in the country.

'Glad It's Over,' Bridegroom Of 78 Says After 4th Marriage

"Yes, it's all over."

Robert Lindley Downing, 78, was referring yesterday, in the words of a man who has come through a great ordeal, to his fourth marriage. His bride is the former Mrs. Mary Shafer Jones, 68.

They were married in the company of a few close friends and relatives at the home of Downing's daughter, Mrs. Travers J. Crocker, at 2210 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The ceremony was simple and it was quickly over, yet Browning, with a background of three previous bridegroom experiences, seemed relieved.

Fifty years ago Downing, a Shakespearean actor, was one of the country's leading tragedians. Then, after playing the role of St. John the Baptist in "The Voice in the Wilderness," he forsook the stage for the pulpit. That was in 1908. In 1917 he was ordained in the Christian Church and has since toured the counry preaching.

Mr. and Mrs. Downing plan to live at Colonial Beach, Va., where Mrs. Downing, a writer, will teach literature and her husband will teach dramatics.

Nazis Aroused as Swiss Names Bull After Hitler

Berlin, April 15 (U.P.).—Johannes Hallinger-Schneider, of Switzerland, aroused Nazi indignation to a high pitch today when it was revealed he had named his pedigreed bull "Hitler."

A photograph of the bull, which browses in the pastures of the Oberau district of Saint Gallen, was published by Das Schwarze Korps, official Storm Troop magazine.

"It is an unheard of insult!" the magazine exclaims, revealing its discovery that another bull also has been named Hitler.

Music Festival Presented Here By Pen Women

Fairy Tale Operetta, Staged By Children, Features Program.

The music of women composers, here from several States for meetings of the National League of American Pen Women, made up a festival program last night in the Willard Hotel.

A dozen composers presented works, which included a one-act operetta for children, several songs, piano numbers, and selections for string ensembles. Assisting the writers were nearly two-score artists, many of them Washington musicians, others coming from New York and Chicago for the program.

The most notable piece on the concert was the fairy story operetta, "The Nightingale," which won the composer, Dorothy Raddle Emery, of Silver Spring, Md., one of the league's outstanding music awards—the Thatcher Hoyt Award for 1936.

Children of Washington's Community Center Chorus appeared in the roles, giving Mrs. Emery's musical setting for the Hans Christian Andersen tale a most competent performance. The songs are well adapted to the limitations of children's voices, and the boy and girl singers last night sang them without vocal strain. Though simple, the melodies have dramatic appeal and hold interest.

Cast Personnel.

Under the direction of Esther Linkins, these boys and girls sang the leading parts: Charles Burton, Emperor; Sylvia Radisch, Nightingale; Weston Jones, gentleman in waiting; Bertha Matthews, kitchen maid; Kenneth Meyer, music master; Marjorie Reed, solo; Judy Conklin, narrator, and Howard Sorrell, pantomime-Death.

A quintet for string instruments and piano by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach received an ovation from the audience. Mrs. Beach, who is known among the league members as the dean of American women composers, was at the piano for the number, "Adagio Expressivo."

Louis Potter, violin-cellist, of Washington, appeared with Katherine E. Lucke, composer-pianist, in two of her compositions, "Cantilena" and "Intermezzo." Charlotte Caldwell, of Illinois, was at the piano for two of her songs, "Missing You" and "Soliloquy," which Ruth Miller, of New York, sang.

Composer Plays Own Works.

Lulu Jones Downing, of Illinois, pianist and composer, played three of her works, "Whiplash," Shadows" and "Nocturne."

Dolph Atherton, of the Washington Opera Club, sang three songs, "Love," by Florence Lowenberg, of Illinois; "Fairy of Spring," by Bonita Crowe, of Georgia, and "The Invocation of Isis," by Marianne Genet, of Pennsylvania. Iris Brussels, of New Jersey, played the first movement of her Sonata for Piano, and a string quartet presented an epic poem by Radie Britain, of Illinois. The same quartet, augmented by Persis Heaton Trimble, of Iowa, as pianist, played "Lovely Night." Miss Trimble's composition. "Soiree," another quintet, by Margaret McClure Stitt, of Ohio, concluded the program. Miss Stitt was at the piano.

The composers and artists were entertained at a reception afterward.

Tijuana Tension Is Reported Eased

Tijuana, Mexico, April 15 (AP).—With 1,200 soldiers in the garrison here prepared for any emergency, unrest in this border community abated somewhat late today as Mayor Ruben Morales assured rations will be provided for 600 destitute families for at least a month.

The soldiers, who patrolled the city for 48 hours, were ordered back today to the garrison to "await instructions."

Transportation to newly opened gold fields 50 miles southeast of here was promised all those willing to "dig for a living." It was predicted, however, that less than 100 of the families will accept the offer.

Soldiers will watch all public gatherings, authorities said.

Unrest in this resort town was prompted by an acute unemployment problem.

President Faces Quiz Tonight By 150 Editors

President Roosevelt will hold one of the biggest press conferences of his career tonight, but nobody intends to quote him on what he says.

In a strictly "off-the-record" session, he will submit to a cross-fire of questions by 150 newspapermen here for the convention beginning today of the American Society of Newpaper Editors.

After answering spontaneous queries the President will reply to 25 additional questions, copies of which were presented to the White House in advance.

This will be the first time a President has answered written or so-called "canned" questions from newspapermen snice the regimes of Hoover and Coolidge.

On entering the White House President Roosevelt discontinued the practice of his predecessors in requiring reporters to put their questions in writing and has responded to thousands of oral interrogations.

Speakers at the editors' convention beginning today at 2 p. m. in the National Press Club will include William Allen White, Emporia, Kans.; Grover Patterson, Toledo Blade, society president, and J. Edgar Hoover, Department of Justice.

Speakers Tell Of U. S. Revival In Real Estate

Visitors From Brooklyn and Hawaii Address District Board.

A revival in real estate extending from the eastern to the western confines of the Nation was reported last night at the annual spring meeting of the Washington Real Estate Board at the Carlton Hotel. Announcements of an upturn came from Joseph W. Catherine, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Charles J. Pietsch, Honolulu, Hawaii.

More than 200 realtors from this city and nearby Virginia heard these speakers from widely separated points recount the conditions indicating a rise in activity. Mr. Pietsch, who is vice president of the Hawiian regional group of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said tourist trade in the islands was greater than ever before and that land and property values were mounting.

Catherine, vice president of the national association and former president of the Real Estate Association of the State of New York and chairman of the central Atlantic area of the national body, told the meeting that one of the greatest markets in the history of the country was developing.

Discussing "What It Takes to Sell Real Estate Today," Vincent P. Bradley, of Trenton, N. J., member and for six years president of the New Jersey Real Estate Commission, urged confidence in a business so sound that the Federal Government is putting millions of dollars into it.

President F. Eliot Middleton of the local board presided at the meeting, which concluded with an entertainment program and buffet supper. Piano numbers were played by J. McKenney Berry, jr., and there was tap dancing by Walter Long, jr.

The stage bill will be jointly headlined by Jimmie Savo, greatest of the stage's pantomimists, and Benay Venuta, singing comedienne. Every indication points to the greatest opening in the history of Glen Echo Park, when Washington's nearby amusement center is thrown open to the public for the summer on Saturday of this week at noon. All of the attractions, with the exception of the Crystal Pool will be in operation. A new feature has been added in the "U-Run-'em-Yourself" motorboats, which are so simple in operation that any novice can drive them with complete safety. The same policy as has prevailed in other seasons will be in force this year. Admission to the park always is free. Ample parking space is provided for motorists.

Belasco.

"THE SMILING LIEUTENANT," Paramount production of "The Waltz Dream" by Leopold Jacobson and Felix Dormann, and the novel, "Nux der Prinzemahl," by Hans Muller, adapted to the screen by Ernst Vajda and Samson Raphaelson, starring Maurice Chevalier, supported by Claudette Colbert, Miriam Hopkins, George Barbier, Charles Ruggles, Elizabeth Patterson and Hugh O'Connell. Music by Oscar Straus and lyrics by Clifford Grey. Directed by Ernest Lubitsch. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

It has been a long while since the beaming countenance of Maurice Chevalier has been reflected from the silver sheet and his inimitable voice wafted from the loudspeakers. So it was like greeting anew an old friend to see and hear one of his better works, "The Smiling Lieutenant," as it opened a seven-day revival yesterdays.

Singing a number of tuneful songs, with music from the pen of Oscar Straus, and otherwise being his own debonair and engaging self, Chevalier carries the burden of the entertainment.

Claudette Colbert, as the leader of a girls' orchestra, is the principal object of devotion until she instructs the Princess Anne, sweetly played by Miriam Hopkins, how to hold the man she married as the result of a mistaken wink. George Barbier is the king of Flausenthurm. Charles Ruggles is briefly seen in the opening sequences. Others in the company include Hugh O'Connell, Robert Strange, Janet Reade, Con MacSunday, Elizabeth Patterson, Harry Bradley, Werner Saxtorph, Karl Stall and Granville Bates.

About The Showshops

"THE COUNTRY DOCTOR." This is the picture, as, of course, you will remember, in which the Dionne Quintuplets appear for the first time outside of the newsreels. It was previewed by the drama desks yesterday afternoon and made a deep impression upon those present for reasons other than the mere appearance in the closing sequences of a dramatic story of the north woods country of Canada of the five gay young ladies who have brought undying fame to Dr. Dafoe, the backwoods practitioner whom the film quite rightly glorifies.

BELL.

Those who watched the unwinding of this simple and intensely human story yesterday in the dim confines of a private projection room became almost immediately conscious that here was the epic of the obscure man of medicine who dedicates his life to the genuine service of others, rather than to the aggrandizement of self; the story of struggle, deprivation and travail experienced by those in remote places who do the best they can with facilities that are so primitive as to seem ridiculous in the light of the present high state of development of the mechanical equipment and the scientific progress that combine to make hospitalization the last word in curative proficiency.

It was my suspicion prior to viewing "The Country Doctor" that here might be merely a rehash of the story presented under the same name as a silent picture with the late Rudolph Schildkraut in the title role—a story that made real the suggestion conveyed by that famous painting of the village doctor sitting, watch in hand, by the bedside of an ill child whose mother hovered in the background a picture of anxiety and anguish. But no such thing.

The new "Country Doctor" goes a great deal further than that in its plea for a closely cemented brotherhood of the medical fraternity, looking toward the end of a universal availability and application of the latest and surest developments of the science of healing.

There is not a great deal of comedy relief in this subject until the "quins" come to the scene. The scene in which they are born will no doubt arouse audiences to gales of laughter, but it seemed to me that amusement reached its peak when the five remarkable young ladies known as Marie, Yvonne, Cecile, Emelie and Annette entertained themselves, as fancy dictated, in their nursery. They were a little skeptical of Jean Hersholt in the role of their beloved Dr. Dafoe, but finally accepted him as the next best playfellow, but not until he had got down on the floor with them and been mauled like Gulliver in the land of the Lilliputs!

If it is honest, homely drama with a tremendously vital tug, plus that prodigious quintet of brunettes, you have been awaiting, you will find it in "The Country Doctor," on the screen at Loew's Fox, beginning tomorrow.

When I returned to the office from the screening of "The Country Doctor" yesterday afternoon, there were awaiting me five beautiful white rabbits, Freddie Bartholomew's Easter gift to the writers of the five best letters dealing with the question of whether in the film version of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," current at the Fox, Master Cedric Errol should wear long curls and a velvet suit, as he was described in the book, or be dressed in the manner of the modern boy of his age.

Having duly considered all of the letters received from the juvenile readers of this page, the award of one of Freddie Bartholomew's prize rabbits is made to each of the following correspondents:

Patty Tercero, 5331 Nebraska avenue northwest.

Isabelle Elaine Brill, 9 N street northwest.

Ethelwyn Clark, 2920 Ontario road northwest.

Pauline Sorem, 3218 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

The first two prize-winners set forth logical arguments for the dressing of the character of Fauntleroy as described in the Frances Hodgson Burnett book, which they evidently cherish as a childhood classic. The three last named were equally cogent in their defense of the modern dress and hair cut adopted by the donor of their rabbits in the picture at the Fox.

If the winners will present themselves at this desk, on the second floor of The Washington Post, between the hours of 4 and 5:30 p. m., their white bunnies will be delivered to them with the compliments of Master Bartholomew.

It is reported by Bess Davis Schreiner, newly appointed subscription manager of the American Theater Society of Washington, that unusual interest is being manifested by theatergoers in the Capital in next season's subscription plays at the National Theater, and this in spite of the fact that no definite titles have been announced, either of the three Theater Guild plays to be offered or of the three to be secured from other sources.

This sudden spurt of interest is due in all surety to the remarkably successful subscription season just closed by the presentation here of the Guild's production of Robert E. Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight," starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. On the strength of what was done last season—meaning this season, of course—patrons of the living drama are willing to gamble that next year will be as prolific in hits. That seems an eminently safe hazard from this distance.

At any rate, the advance reservations for next year far exceed the record of any previous season of the American Society. This is the more remarkable because the subscription books for the 1936-37 season are not as yet even open, "officially." Old subscribers are not waiting for any formal "opening" of the books, but are sending in their renewals by the score. New subscribers also are taking time by the forelock, as the saying goes, and making their reservations of desirable seat locations.

For those who wish to save time, the correct phone number is District 2433.

Music-Hath-Charms Note.

They play the wrong music in "The Country Doctor" when June Lang stands and watches her sweetheart soar away to Montreal in his plane.

Obviously, the proper number would be "Auld Lang Sighin'," or something like that!

Movie Trade-Marks.

Holywood April 14.

Every flicker made by a major picture company, with one exception, bears a trade-mark, which is better known than some of the performers. The company which hasn't a trade-mark is United Artists. There is merely a credit slide, which says: "Released by United Artists." Sam Goldwyn, chief of that company, doesn't believe in an insignia.

DIETZ.

Metro's trade-mark, Leo the lion, is better known than Donald Duck. Leo is a character. He speaks to exhibitors and extends his paw to the public in advertisements. The lion trade-mark is the work of Howard Dietz. In 1916, Dietz left Columbia University and joined the Philip Goodman Advertising Agency. Goodman handled the Paramount account. Samuel Goldfish, then chairman of the Paramount board of directors, left that firm and with Edgar Selwyn organized the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Then Goldwyn was Goldfish and he wanted a trade-mark.

• • • •

Goodman was preparing the early advertisements for that firm and Dietz was asked for a trade-mark idea. He had just come from Columbia, and so he suggested the lion. An artist named Morris Rosenbaum made the sketch, and Dietz added the Latin inscription. Through the mergers of Metro and Mayer the lion trade-mark was retained.

Today, Dietz is in charge of the Metro publicity and advertising departments, and Edgar Selwyn is now a producer at the firm which uses part of his name.

• • • •

The Paramount trade-mark came into existence in 1916, also. It was the result of the merger between the Famous Players organization and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. This new corporation's advertising account was handled by the Lesan Advertising Co. Each unit in the merger insisted on keeping its own trade-mark. However, it was decided that the distributing agency—Paramount—should have a distinctive trade-mark of its own. After all, they were releasing and selling the pictures. At 4 o'clock, one afternoon, the Lesan Agency was notified that they must present a Paramount trade-mark by the next morning. Mr. Lesan and Francis H. Sisson, now vice president of the Guarantee Trust Co., went to work on it.

As the most "paramount" thing they could think of, they drew a rugged mountain peak. As the picture company was selling stars, they added a ring of stars around the mountain. Now all they had to do was to get in the name of the company. They lettered the word "Paramount" across the mountain in the same script which is used today.

• • • •

Twentieth Century-Fox has the latest trade-mark, and it is the result of the newest film merger. The Twentieth Century section belongs to Darryl Zanuck. After he left Warners, he continued to play polo on the Warner field. One day, after a practice game, Zanuck was discussing the new company with Sam Engel, a writer. Engel suggested the name. The actual insignia was worked out by numerous artists after many conferences, the flashing lights over the skyscrapers was William Goetz' idea. The musical score of the drums was written by Alfred Newman.

Mrs. Roosevelt Honored By Congressional Club

Enters With Mrs. William M. Wittington; Mrs. Cordell Hull Also at Breakfast; Mrs. Joseph Herbert Acts as Usher.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. Roosevelt, wearing a gown of cornflower blue moire taffeta, with a fuchsia bow on her corsage of orchids and fuchsia flowers on her navy hat, was guest of honor yesterday at the annual breakfast of the Congressional Club, given at the Mayflower Hotel.

The First Lady entered with Mrs. William M. Whittington, president of the club, who sat at her left and Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who was at her right. Her every-ready smile and gracious greeting to those whom she recognized in the gathering evidenced her enjoyment of the occasion. It is the third year she has been the honor guest of the club.

The table at which Mrs. Roosevelt sat with the other guests of honor and club officers was decorated with bouquets of pink tulips and roses, Japanese iris and daffodils forming a border along its full length, and was lighted with candles in red, white and blue. Other tables had centerpieces of the same flowers. Palms formed the background for the guest table and decorated the stage for the United States Marine Band orchestra, directed by Capt. Taylor Branson, which provided music during the breakfast and added color to the picture with the members' red uniforms.

Autograph on Programs.

The breakfast programs included a picture of Mrs. Roosevelt bearing her autograph. Preceding the musical numbers by Constance Hejda, of Baltimore, contralto, accompanied by Dorothy Andrews, and Elsa Raner, violinist, accompanied by George H. Wilson, Mrs. Whittington introduced the First Lady, who spoke briefly, expressing her pleasure at being the guest of the club for the third season.

Mrs. Whittington wore a printed chiffon with green and red figures on a black ground, the colors repeated in the flowers on her wide-brimmed black straw hat. Next to her sat Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, wife of the Speaker of the House, who wore a wide red hat with a white flower on the front, a dress of the same shade, and a matching ribbon on her eyeglasses.

Others at the guest table were Mrs. George Sutherland, Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wives of justices of the Supreme Court; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Irvine Lenroot, a past president of the Congressional Club; Mrs. Porter Dale and Mrs. Clarence Dill, also past presidents. The present officers also were seated there, including Mrs. J. P. Pope, Mrs. Claude Fuller, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. H. C. Ransley, Mrs. A. H. Greenwood, Mrs. Brent Spence and Mrs. Edward F. Burke.

Hats Have Flowers.

Mrs. Joseph Herbert, chief usher, hardly had time to eat, she was so busy seeing that details of the function went as they should. She was dressed in a rust-colored silk with a penciled figure in white, and wore a rust-colored felt hat and mauve orchids.

Mrs. Charles J. Colden, president of the 73 Club, wore a pink frill with her tailored suit of black, and a small bouquet of roses decorated the front of her hat. Most of the hats, by the way, seemed to have little bunches of flowers on the fronts like those on Mrs. Roosevelt's, or to be trimmed with a band and tailored bow such as were in white on the black hat worn by Mrs. Hull.

Among other guests were Mrs. George W. Norris, wife of Senator Norris; Mrs. Tilman B. Parks, wife of Representative Parks, who was in a red dress with which she wore a large black hat; Mrs. Pleasant T. Chapman, of Illinois, one of the founders of the club, who came especially for the occasion; Mrs. William Humphreys, another founder; Mrs. Edward T. Taylor, who became a member a year after the club was organized and who is still active in it; Mrs. S. W. Beaks, of Michigan, who has been attending the Congressional Club breakfasts for 23 years; Mrs. Edward Pou, wife of the late dean of the House of Representatives; her daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, who wore a white suit and hat and a blue blouse, and Mrs. John J. Cochran, of Missouri, one of the club's active workers.

Two Poets Read Own Writings At Benefit Here

Mrs. Chapin, Harold Vinal Acclaimed at Program in Phillips Gallery.

By Dudley Harmon.

Harold Vinal and Katherine Garrison Chapin, in private life Mrs. Francis Biddle, gave a poetry reading yesterday afternoon at the Phillips Memorial Gallery. The reading was for the benefit of the magazine, Voices, of which Mr. Vinal, as interested in finding new talent as in writing good poetry, is editor.

Both poets read from their own work. Miss Chapin's poem, "Secret," inspired by the Van Gogh exhibition last winter in New York, was so enthusiastically applauded, she read it twice. Mr. Vinal read, among other selections, parts from the prologue and epilogue of "Hurricane," his latest publication. The scene of the poem is Hurricane Island, off the coast of Maine, once owned by his great-grandparents. In addition, the poet read several verses of young writers who have appeared in his magazine.

Many Men Present.

There were more men present yesterday afternoon than are usually found at such gatherings.

Among those who attended were Mr. Duncan Phillips, Mr. Lothrop Stoddard and Mrs. Stoddard, with whom Mr. Vinal is staying; the Counselor of the Greek Legation, Mr. Nicholas Lely, and the Second Secretary of the French Embassy, Mr. Claude de Boisanger.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wearing a black coat trimmed with silver fox and a black brimless hat, came with her daughter, Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye.

Others there were Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, who entertained at dinner last night in Mr. Vinal's honor; Mrs. Duncan Phillips and her mother, Mrs. Charles Acker; Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. David Reed, wife of former Senator Reed; Mrs. Winthrop Chanler, Mrs. Charles Lea, Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, Mrs. Frank Simonds, Mrs. Edward Moran, wife of the Representative from Maine, Mr. Vinal's State, and Mrs. Herbert Slocum, aunt of Miss Chapin, with whom the latter is staying during her visit to Washington.

Will Leave Today.

Mr. Vinal, who leaves Washington today, will go next month to his home in Vinal Island, named after his family, off the coast of Maine.

"I live in a big house there," he said yesterday. "So big, in fact, that I have decided to run it as an inn this summer."

Before he turned to poetry, Mr. Vinal was a pianist of note, and used to give concerts with Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard.

Miss Chapin, who will be joined tomorrow in Washington by her husband, former chairman of the National Relations Board, plans to remain in the Capital over the week-end.

Receive in Drawing Room Decorated with Spring Flowers; Navy Blue Frocks Favored by Women of Diplomatic Set Attending.

By Francesca McKenney.

Yesterday afternoon the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness di Sant'Orsola entertained at a cocktail party in their home on Hawthorne street in Wesley Heights, from 5 until 7 o'clock.

The table in the dining room was decorated with pink snapdragons. The French doors from the small library where the long white bar was placed were open and many of the guests gathered on the flagstone porch overlooking the wide green lawn.

The host and hostess received in the drawing room, which was decorated with early spring flowers. The latter wore a black and white printed gown fashioned on long lines with a full skirt touching the floor.

Navy blue frocks were the favorite of the majority of the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps and resident society who attended the party. Some added a touch of color with a flower or a printed silk blouse.

Among those who chose blue for the occasion were Mme. de Bianchi, who was accompanied by her husband, the Minister of Portugal; Mme. Popovici, who was also accompanied by her husband, the Secretary of the Rumanian Legation; the Secretary of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter, the latter in blue; Senorita Rebeca Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile, who wore a blue suit with a yellow blouse, and Mrs. Campbell Prichett, who wore a single orchid at the shoulder of her blue ensemble. She was accompanied by the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui.

One very small guest, a black Scottie who was attracting a great deal of attention yesterday as he made his way in and out among the guests, stopping now and then to accept a sandwich or two, was the uninvited member of the party, but enjoyed himself nevertheless. Apparently, as he strolled by he saw the party and thought that it would be fun to join, which he promptly did. From the length of time he stayed, he was not disappointed.

Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, was chatting with friends during the afternoon, as was the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable; the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Signor Bartolomeo Migone; Mlle. Sibilla Skidelsky, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Capt. William W. Galbraith, Mr. William K. Ryan, Miss Florence Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment, Capt. and Mrs. Puleston, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Miss Mary Louise Johnson and her guests, Mrs. Prichard, of Rome, Italy.

Mrs. Charles B. Keyser has been called to Richmond, Mo., by the death of her only sister, Mrs. G. A. Carlson.

A Flower Garden Print

AS FRESH as the spring is this two-piece silk print in dark blue with tiny white flower figures sprayed over it. A new and intriguing touch is the Gibson Girl styling of the little puff sleeves piped in pique. Also of white pique are the crisp peaked revers accentuating the shoulder width, and the double white carnation fastened at the neck. This exciting model is by Janel Hollander, one of America's leading young designers. A group of her "Garden Print" frocks will swoop down on Washington tomorrow on an Eastern airliner from New York and will be shown at 3:30 in the afternoon in Frank R. Jelleff's little theater.

Vitamin "A" in Milk Varies With Cattle

Breeds of dairy cattle differ in the amount of vitamin "A" contained in their milk, research workers at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station have discovered. Jersey milk was found to have the highest content of this important food element, and Ayershire milk contained the least. Great differences in the amount of vitamin "A" in winter and summer milk was also found, the summer milk being much richer.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Senator Harrison Finds Surcease From Worry in Muffins.

By Pattie Ellicott.

AFTER a long day in the Senate tussling with recalcitrant Republicans, Senator "Pat" Harrison, of Mississippi, one of the Democratic leaders of the Upper House, always can smile when he reaches home and finds that there are Berry Griddle Muffins for dinner.

Mrs. Harrison enlisted the category of a woman praised by the Psalmist "who looketh well to the ways of her household," knows that a tired and hungry man best can be revived and put into better spirits by having one of his favorite dishes served to him at dinner time.

Other home makers can provide novelty to their informal dinners and maids' day suppers by mixing up a batch of berry griddle muffins. Here is the recipe for them:

MRS. "PAT" HARRISON.

Berry Griddle Muffins.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons shortening
½ cup milk
¾ cup berries

Sift dry ingredients, rub in shortening and add milk to make a soft batter. Add the berries and drop in muffin rings and bake on a hot griddle. Without the berries these are like baking powder biscuit.

Child's Desire To Keep Aloof Called Natural

Yearning for Solitude Held Normal Phase of Development.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE SEEMS to be a period in the life of nearly every child when he wants to be left alone. No matter how companionable he has been, however, eagerly he may have haunted the footsteps of his parents and frequented the family gatherings, all at once he takes to the hermit's life.

At least he does when in his own home. Outside he behaves much as usual with his friends and companions and even with older people. But at home he is silent and withdrawn, almost morose in behavior, and whenever possible retires to his own room apparently to sulk in silence.

Longing for Solitude.

Such a longing for solitude and discomfort in the family group generally proves trying to his parents. They are apt to feel that the child is becoming morbid, and try their best to learn his secret sorrow and lure him back to their midst.

Such effort, however, is wasted. Even if for the moment he seems to respond, it is only his body that is present, his spirit is still withdrawn. He is not morbid nor sulking nor indulging any secret vices. He is passing through a natural stage of development.

Let Him Alone.

Hitherto he has been simply a member of the family, leading the group life of the home. Now he is growing conscious of himself as a separate person with interests and aims of his own, and perhaps at variance with those to which he has been trained. The family is apparently unconscious of the change and expects him to remain part of the group in sympathy with its ideals and principles.

All at once he feels himself alone, misunderstood, out of touch with his environment and his past. Left alone he will in time integrate himself, and emerge from his shell.

Dishonest Parents Encourage Deceit In Their Children

The mother who orders her young son to answer the doorbell and tell "Whoever's there I'm not home," and the father who boasts of padding his expense account, need not be surprised when little Johnny or Mary grow up to be deceitful, lying or thoroughly dishonest individuals.

This point was made recently by Isaac Bildersee, pricipal of the Seth Low Junior High School, Brooklyn, at a round table discussion of delinquency by New York educators at the Astor Hotel.

Contending that delinquency is a disease, Mr. Bildersee emphasized that even in "better" homes, children observed examples of dishonesty that undoubtedly serve as encouragement in developing any deliquent tendencies they might have. What their parents do is the pattern followed by the average child, Mr. Bildersee brought out. Setting an example of truthfulness is the duty of every parent, he said.

New Cream Wash Cleanses Pores Thoroughly and Gives Face Fresh and Radiant Look.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

By Mignon.

DON'T tell me there is nothing new under the sun! What with the kind of coal people burn these days and the onslaught of soot that our complexions have to face, it was left for a very clever manufacturer of fine toilet products to bring out something to dig the dirt out of our pores and make us white again.

The product looks like a cream and comes in a cold-cream jar. When you put your finger into the cream or paste and rub it over the back of your hand or on your face you find that it has exteremely fine grains of something in it which are designed to do for your skin what certain cleaning powders do for your bath-tub.

The product is used this way: Put your finger into the jar and put a dab of cream into the middle of your palm. Add hot water to it and with your other hand make a thin paste. Rub your hands together and thoroughly cover your face, rubbing gently. While this is not a soap, it is very distinctly a cleanser and it is afterward rinsed off with lukewarm water. Two rinsings are better than one.

I think this is a real find on the market as a product for people with large pores into which the dirt becomes caked, and for outdoor women. After you use it do not forget to add plenty of cold cream to your face, because if you do not you will probably be complaining of a dry skin. Always use cream, no matter how you clean your face. Your skin contains less oil as you grow older.

Blood Vessel's Hardening May Cause a Stroke

Clogged Artery May Break and Hemiplegia, or Half Paralysis Occur.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WHEN we discuss the effects of hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis) our first concern is, has circulation been seriously interfered with? We ask this question because if vessels are narrowed they may not be able to deliver to the tissues the needed amount of blood. We are no longer in the dark as to why kidneys are affected or just why the circulation may be markedly decreased in the extremities, as cross-sections of many of the blood vessels will show reduction in size varying from a slight amount to complete plugging or occlusion.

Whenever an important blood vessel in the brain becomes clogged from any cause nourishment is shut off from a certain section, sometimes of sufficient extent to result in paralysis. The most common brain accident, however, is occasioned by the breaking of one of these small, hardened blood vessels, permitting blood to flow into the brain substance or between the brain and the skull, causing pressure. This situation, called apoplexy or stroke, may result in what is termed hemiplegia.

Extent May Vary.

When we speak of hemiplegia we mean paralysis of half of the body, although the degree—that is, the extent of injury—may vary considerably. Curiously enough the muscles of the chest are not seriously affected, neither are the muscles that move the eyeballs. The condition generally comes on suddenly and the victim is often one who apparently is in normal health, actively engaged in his occupation.

As a rule hemorrhage that is sufficient to cause paralysis does not present a favorable outlook. During the attack the patient is deeply unconscious and cannot be roused. The face is usually flushed and puffy, and breathing is slow, deep, and often noisy. Sometimes the cheeks will be distended with each expiration. There may be convulsions involving the whole body or confined to one side. If the temperature is high (and this should be taken with a rectal thermometer) the future is less bright. As recovery begins speech may be indistinct, with marked disturbance of memory.

Patience Demanded.

In some cases apoplexy may prove rapidly fatal, particularly if the hemorrhage is extensive. Pneumonia is likely to complicate the picture unless the patient is under ideal nursing conditions, and this adds an element of danger. If the paralysis extends for a month or more recovery of function of the injured nerve pathways is unlikely. On the other hand, if muscular power begins to return after a few days the gain will probably be steady. Much patience on the part of all members of the family will be required, as it is sometimes several months before the victim will be able to walk about under his own power.

During the acute attack the afflicted one should be handled as gently as possible and promptly put to bed with the head elevated. Restlessness must be combated with appropriate remedies, and no attempt made to feed the patient other than the possible use of glucose injected directly into the circulation.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Attractive Girls With Old-Fashioned Ideals Are Probably as Plentiful Today as Ever They Were.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have read with considerable interest and sometimes amusement your column since coming to Washington. Although I realize you do not act as an agency for introducing young persons to each other, I am nevertheless appealing to you to help me with my problem.

* * * *

Mary Haworth.

I am a Government clerk, having come up from Atlanta some three months ago. I am almost 21, 6 feet tall, weigh 200 pounds, have brown hair and eyes, wear rimless glasses, might be described as "professional" in appearance; am a combination of athlete and scholar; son of an army officer (deceased) and a R. N. (deceased); am rather bashful; do not smoke or drink; am rather a poor conversationalist, but can hold my own; haven't much money, despite my job, as I am supporting a sister back home. Main hobbies: Study of psychology and working with flowers; football, hiking, swimming and ping-pong in season. Graduated from high school and attended Presbyterian College one term in Clinton, S. C.

And now for my degree of expectancy with regard to the opposite sex. Rather exorbitant demands, perhaps, considering my own unattractiveness, but still—my demands.

She must be my age or younger. (I have seen many girls I would have liked to know, except they were all older than I, which made me feel ill at ease. There seems to be a dearth of girls around 20.) She must like some athletics; be willing to do without much entertainment that costs money; be what is termed a good sport; be intellectual, but at the same time not make me feel inferior; a good conversationalist with a wider range of topics than her last dance, a new dress, or what Jane did to fool the boy friend. She must not smoke, not that I have moral objections, but because I believe girls who smoke do so in order not to be considered "prudes"; and because I believe if I have the backbone to refuse liquor I am entitled to a girl friend who likewise refuses to follow the pattern of the pack.

Furthermore, she must have old-fashioned ideals, but have them attractively packaged in a genial nature. She must show she puts some thought on modern problems.

* * * *

I know it is rather foolish to ask all this in one girl, Miss Haworth, but I believe she exists somewhere in the District, and perhaps I may find her. Your first suggestion will probably be that I attend a young people's church society. I have attended two or three but failed to find her. I struck up an acquaintance with two or three girls but they failed to come up to expectations. Perhaps my type could be found among student nurses. Could you possibly fix it up for me to meet some of them?

* * * *

Although I realize the responsibility you would be assuming in introducing me to any girls, I assure you that your confidence in me as a gentleman would not be misplaced. If you desire, I could drop by The Post after work some afternoon and let you decide whether I would be worth the risk. Your consideration and cooperation will be appreciated. Cordially, you know you may find that girl you're looking for. I don't find your requirements so very unreasonable. I'm sure there must be scores and even hundreds of such girls here in the District. I have no ready contacts among student nurses, but perhaps something can be worked out along that line. Do come in to see me one afternoon soon. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Friend Provided.

DEAR SOUTHERNER: You have guessed the worst! I am going to suggest that you join a young people's church group; or, at least, I am going to suggest introducing you to a young man I know who is on the program committee of a young people's group in one of the finest old Protestant churches in the District. He is a grand young man, about 24, I should say; up and coming in his profession; highly intelligent, graduated from one of the famous New England colleges, and just as discriminating as you are in the matter of girl friends.

* * * *

If you will drop by The Post some afternoon I will pave the way to your meeting this young man. He, in turn, will see that you meet the young men and women of his group. These contacts may lead to others outside the church group, and first thing

Lace Is a 'Must' On Summer List

Lace is one of the "musts" in the spring and summer wardrobe, says Diane Faine, young American designer. In her opinion it is always flattering—particularly for cruise and travel wear. Furthermore, it is casual, cool and comfortable and never troublesome to pack.

She has designed several lace ensembles in the tailored tempo with skirts attached to slips to avoid sagging at the waistlines. Some of the jackets have modified peplums and others padded out sleeves.

Ruffles, Flutings Add Ultra-Feminine Touch

An ultra-feminine quality is apparent in the costumes for late spring and summer just displayed by the American designer, Maybelle Manning.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Hired to impersonate June, beautiful young stepsister of Jim Bradley, Ruth Dayton finds herself in love with her make believe brother. The impersonation was the idea of Joe and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim. They had hired Ruth to go with them to Chicago to the bedside of Jim when he was thought to be dying after an auto accident. June, they said, was ill and could not go. Jim was blinded by the crash and would not know of the deceit.

Arrived in Chicago, however, a series of events leads Ruth to suspect that Joe and Clara, are eager to bring about Jim's death. When she openly charges Clara Bradley with desiring Jim's death, the latter and Pascoe, man nurse who is in league with the Bradley's, overcome her and truss her up.

Chapter 13.

When the world cleared enough Ruth could see that Pascoe and Clara Bradley bent over her.

It had been a blow from Clara Bradley that finally conquered her.

"You struck me with a book. I saw you," Ruth panted, still trying to free her hands.

Clara Bradley laughed. The mask was certainly down from her face.

"How bright she is, Pascoe. I hit her on the head with a book and she has sense enough to know that I did it."

"Be quiet, Clara, you haven't any too much sense yourself."

"I have sense enough to know when we've got a dangerous person in the house. If I have my way about it, this thing will be settled right now."

"You brought her into this without my knowledge," Pascoe's voice held deep scorn. "Now how are you going to get out of it?"

"You'll see how I'll get out of it. There's one sure way"——

This time Pascoe was truly angry. "Shut up," he hissed. "What good does it do you just going ahead and making a bad matter worse? Leave the girl to me."

"Very well," Clara Bradley said. "Help yourself. I wash my hands of her." Without another word she left the room, as though with that statement and the act she absolved herself of any guilt concerning Ruth's detention.

Watches Ruth.

Left alone, Ruth watched Pascoe in terror. He said never a word. Just sat there, opposite her watching every move she made, smiling just a little, making his many gold filled teeth fairly glisten in his mirthless humor.

"I don't like to hurt you," Pascoe said. "I certainly am not happy about the position all of us find ourselves it. You're a very pretty, charming young woman, but I confess I'd just as soon you were not here."

"We're agreed on that," Ruth said.

"The next thing to do is to make the best of a bad situation. You are here and we've got to put up with you. We aren't murderers, you know. We can't take you for a ride, actually, even though Clara did seem to suggest it.

"Then what can you do?"

"I'm coming to that fast enough, Ruth, don't be impatient. We're all engaged here on a little mission of mercy. It won't be very long now, but until it is over you'll be obliged to stay here. No need to go all over that again. I've heard the Bradleys explain it to you several times. You're familiar enough with that."

Ruth nodded. She watched her captor fascinatedly.

"Well, then. Afterward——"

"After Jim—dies?"

"Yes. Afterward. We'll all be free. Until then——"

"So I am to stay here?"

"As long as there is any need of it. But you'll stay in your room—locked in here, of course."

"And Jim?"

"You can see Jim for a few minutes, when he asks to see you. There won't be any opportunity for you to cut up any monkeyshines. I'll see to that. Now, is it agreed?"

"There isn't anything to agree on," Ruth said. "I have to do what I'm told to do."

"Spoken like a sensible girl," Pascoe said, coming up to her and untying the cord. Just to make sure that your quite O. K., I'll lock you in your room for the afternoon."

Now, not unkindly, but with decision, he pushed Ruth toward her bed.

Quick as a flash, before she could protest, he stooped, kissed her full on the lips as she sat on the bed's edge. Then, laughing, he walked quickly from the room, closed the door and locked it.

When he had gone Ruth arose and examined her face in the mirror. There was a slight bruise and a swelling at the left temple where Clara Bradley had hit her with the book. The sight of that bruise, more than anything else, brought home to Ruth the full danger of her position.

There were no more vague fears. All her fears had taken tangible shape now. The Bradleys had hired her to gain their entrance into this wealthy home unquestioned.

Once in the house they had taken immediate possession of everyone and everything, discharging the nurses and servants, replacing them with their own henchmen.

There was only one explanation for that. They meant to do away with Jim Bradley. They were determined. They would stop at nothing.

Ruth remembered the look on Clara Bradley's face when she had told her how serious she believed Jim's illness really was. "There isn't any chance for him to get well," she had said with conviction.

They knew he couldn't get well, because they meant to prevent it! Ruth came to this terrifying conclusion as she lay on her bed puzzling out the maze of it all.

Bette came at 6, bringing a tray. "Mrs. Bradley says you're to have your supper here in the room tonight. Mr. Jim is worse again. You couldn't see him, anyway."

"I don't want anything to eat, Bette."

"Oh, you'd better, miss," Bette said, going straight ahead and setting out the food. "You didn't have much lunch and this has been a strenuous day. Look, this is a good supper."

It was a good supper. Ruth lifted up the napkin, took a satisfying sniff. "Maybe I will," she said, "I'll wash up a bit first," and she disappeared into the bathroom.

When she came out Bette had set the small table attractively. Now she stood examining with interest the lovely little blue gown that Ruth had flung across the back of a chair.

"Did you get this today?" Bette ventured the question.

"Yes. Like it?"

"Like it? I think it's the prettiest dress I've ever seen."

"I thought so, too." Ruth sat down to her supper. "That single red poppy makes it simply delectable, doesn't it? Like something good enough to eat."

Bette laughed, held the dress up to herself suggestively. "When you're through with it, don't forget it's just my size."

Ruth laughed. It was just Bette's size. A wild idea pounded into Ruth's head. They were just the same height. Light-haired, too, both of them.

"I'll remember," Ruth said, concealing her excitement. "Maybe you can have that dress, Bette, how would you like that?"

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I NEED HELP in fixing my husband's den," said a lady with a husband who'd rather stay home nights and peck at his portable typewriter or tinker with his golf clubs than go out for the gayest party in town.

"The only room available for his den is the sun parlor, which is right off the living room and quite prominent when the door is open. The one plain windowless wall is filled with bookshelves and the rest of the room is loaded down with trophies, golf sticks, old newspapers and a typewriter. He adores this room and I don't want to cramp his style here, but I would like to make it a little more presentable. I thought I'd get two new armchairs to replace some awful-looking ones he has there. What coverings would stand the hard wear a man would give them? What colors would look best—the living room is in apricot, apple green and pale gold. He has an old table now for his desk but I thought I'd get a new desk, something with drawer space for his papers, but he prefers a flat-top type. What do you advise? What curtains and rugs?"

We'd have leather chairs . . . men adore them. Green would be a good color . . . then a tweedy weave gray rug and curtains in yellow. The desk that would suit best for the purpose is a knee-hole type . . . it would look attractive, too. Why not have a shelf built around under the window sills on the window sides of the room. Under it have cupboards built to hold his golf clubs, odds and ends, and you could alternate the cupboards with open book shelves to make an interesting design for these lower walls. This room would harmonize pleasantly with the adjoining living room, yet it would have individuality of its own and plenty of space for putting his things out of sight.

Democrat Leader Says Both Hoover and Landon Have Embraced Principles.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., April 15.—Postmaster General James A. Farley, opening the national and State campaigns in President Roosevelt's home State, said tonight that "one by one the principles and policies of the Roosevelt Administration are being embraced by leaders of the opposition."

He specifically charged that former President Herbert Hoover and Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, prominently mentioned for the Republican Presidential nomination, have "accepted and adopted" the principles of the Democratic farm program as their own.

"Mr. Hoover, in his farm speech, accepted the principles of the Democratic farm program," the State and national Democratic chairman declared. "He had said for many years that certain things could not be done in sustaining farm prices. Now he says they can be done. To hear his discussion of how agricultural surpluses can be controlled, one would think that he had invented our program.

"In fact, he said at Fort Wayne that he did invent it. But the hard fact is that he fought it with all his might for 12 years."

Farley further said that Gov. Landon "implied that the Democrats had not gone far enough in raising farm prices."

"This is a virtual acceptance of the principles upon which Mr. Roosevelt conducted his campaign in 1932. These converts to Democratic principles are coming late in life, but we will, in spirit of charity, be glad to take them in."

Farley and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York sounded the keynote of the forthcoming campaigns at a $25-a-plate Democratic dinner.

"Those who call themselves the leaders of the Republican Party are just a group of discredited and disappointed men," he said.

"They cannot agree upon what they want, or whom they want as leaders. * * * With this situation before us, it is hard to see how we can recognize or even find our opposition.

"We cannot fight with a ghost, and the Republican Party is the nearest thing to a ghost that we have seen since Shakespeare wrote 'Hamlet.' Anyway, I think this particular ghost is going West in November, 1936."

Farley assailed the Liberty League, and accused it of "now wanting to hitch-hike on the Republican bandwagon."

"But the Republican leaders seem very cold to them, for they realize that if they are found consorting with the Liberty League the American people will think even less of the Republicans than they do now," he declared. "And so the Liberty League is making it more embarrassing for the Republicans every day.

"And they cannot ignore the League because they will apparently have to depend on the ideas the league has developed for them. The fact is that whether they like it or not, the Republican leaders represent the same forces of reaction that the Liberty League represents.

"They would go back to the Old Deal and let those people run the country who presided over its downfall."

Gov. Lehman, defending his administration since he took office in 1933, said that "in no other State in the Union has the performance of any dominant political party more closely followed its promises than in the case of the Democratic Party in this State."

Roosevelt Illinois Vote

of their partisans into the Democratic ranks. But Democratic Party leaders retorted that the voters were not required to mark preference votes unless they wished to.

Edward A. Hayes, chairman of the Knox for President Club, termed his candidate's victory "a long stride toward nomination" and former Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, estimated the Chicagoan now had 130 delegates to the Cleveland convention, a figure, he added, not "approached by any other candidate."

Managers for Knox claimed election of 29 Republican convention delegates favorable to him, but returns from the delegate race lagged.

The district delegates, of whom 49 were chosen, are, under State law, "advised" by the outcome of the preferential primary in their districts. The delegates-at-large, to be named at the State party gathering, are "advised" by the total State vote.

Edgar J. Cook, Illinois manager for Senator Borah, read some indications of significance to the party in the Illinois vote. He said: "Evidently a large body of Republican voters voted in the Democratic primary by choice and evidently the liberality of that party appeals to these voters. It will require a liberal candidate in the Republican party to not only bring these voters back but also the many, many thousands who left it in 1932. The remarkable showing of Senator Borah in Illinois without any organization and without any funds was a true test of his popularity. The vote he received indicates how popular he is with the mass of Republican voters."

One of the first pleas for party unity after the primary battle came from C. Wayland Brooks, who was victor in the seven-entry race for the Republican nomination for Governor on the basis of returns from 5,664 precincts. These gave him 439,910 votes to 174,337 for former Gov. Len Small, his closest rival. Brooks urged a united front at once in preparation for the November election.

The primary results pitted Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, winner in the Democratic race, against former Senator Otis F. Glenn, the Republican winner, for Lewis' seat next November. Lewis won hands down from C. H. Kavanaugh and Ruth McNamara with a total of 646,745 votes in 4,214 precincts to an aggregate of 93,273 for his two rivals. Former Congressman William E. Hull, of Peoria, conceded victory to Glenn in the Republican fight, with 5,510 precincts giving Glenn 36,616 votes to 143,432 for Hull.

Present Representatives from Illinois rode through the primary in safety, incomplete returns indicated. In no case did an incumbent seem in danger of primary defeat.

Nebraska Effect Doubtful.

Lincoln, Nebr., April 15 (AP).—What benefit would accrue from Senator William E. Borah's victory in Nebraska's Republican preferential primary vote was an unanswered question tonight.

The Idaho Senator scored a 5-to-1 victory in the race in which he had no official opposition but the "write-in" vote for Gov. Alf M. Landon pleased the Kansan's supporters.

The preference result was not mandatory upon the 14 delegates to the Cleveland convention chosen yesterday and most of them declined to commit themselves about their leanings.

Only about half of the voters who participated in the contest to choose a Republican gubernatorial nominee voted for the Idahoan. His total in 1,789 of the 2,025 precincts was 62,420. In 1,750 precincts more than 110,000 Republicans voted for Governor. The Landon "write-ins" totaled 12,472 and "write-ins" for others included Herbert Hoover, 241, and Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, 146. None of the Republican leaders made any campaign.

President Roosevelt, who was unopposed on the Democratic preference ballot, won a solid State delegation to the Philadelphia convention.

Expectations of friends of Senator George W. Norris that he would draw a heavy write-in vote failed to materialize. In approximately 1,750 precincts at least 948 Democratic and 586 Republicans wrote his name on their ballots. Norris declined to file in the primary, but may be an independent candidate in the general election.

Former Representative Terry Carpenter, a supporter of the "principle" of the Townsend old age pension plan and a friend of Norris, appeared to have won an upset victory for the Democratic Senate nomination. In 1,755 precincts the vote was: Carpenter, 37,006; J. C. Quigley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, 33,700; State Treasurer George E. Hall, 22,709; Emil E. Placek, 23,003.

Former Representative Robert C. Simmons, Republican Senate nominee two years ago, won the honor again easily over Harry O. Palmer.

Decocrats split in a hotly contested race for Democratic National Committeeman. Senator Edward R. Burke won in a three-cornered race in which his rivals criticized him for opposing certain Administration bills. He claimed Administration support. His vote in 1,700 precincts was 48,619, to 39,036 for former Representative Dan V. Stephens, and 31,218 for Carpenter.

Most of the State races were decided. Gov. R. L. Cochran won an easy renomination on the Democratic ticket, and Dwight Griswold won his third Republican gubernatorial nomination in a row.

Burke Deserts Nominee.

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, last night announced that he would not support his party's nominee for the Senate to succeed Senator George W. Norris, who did not file for renomination in the Republican primary. The Democratic nomination was won by former Representative Terry Carpneter, supporter of the "principle" of the Townsend old-age pension plan.

Senator Burke said he would like to support Norris, running as an independent.

"I feel certain," Burke said, "that if there is a popular demand in Nebraska that Senator Norris make the race as an independent he will do so. And I believe the demand will be made."

James C. Quigley, Democratic State chairman, had announced that if he was nominated he would throw his support to Norris.

House Committee Gives Ellenbogen Measure Special Status.

Sisson Repeal Proposal Is Due for Action on April 27.

By James D. Secrest.

The Sisson bill to repeal the anti-red rider on the 1936 District appropriations act was assured consideration by the House next District day, April 27, yesterday when the House Rules Committee granted a special rule on the Ellenbogen rent commission measure.

Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, who almost single-handed fought the recent filibuster against the rent bill, yesterday went before the Rules Committee unannounced.

The committee, recognizing that three District days had been wasted by filibuster, voted the rule, although such an action is distinctly unusual in connection with local legislation.

Will Limit Debate.

The rule, which may be called up tomorrow, will limit all debate on amendments to an hour and a half, thus insuring a vote the same afternoon.

Mrs. Norton and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, appeared before the Rules Committee to request the rule although the former favors the bill and the latter opposes it.

The District Committee chairman explained that, regardless of whether the bill is passed or defeated, the House should have an opportunity to vote without further delay. Dirksen agreed.

House Temper Short.

House leaders, it was learned, agreed to the special rule on Monday, after one Representative had insisted upon carrying on his filibuster over the protest of Majority Leader Bankhead. It was for that reason that Mrs. Norton abruptly halted proceedings after all general debate on the measure was exhausted although she had previously stated she would fight it through that day.

Because of the length of the Ellenbogen bill, any one would be able to carry on his filibuster conceivably until the end of the session by offering sundry amendments and speaking five minutes on each.

The temper of the House is such because of the numerous roll calls forced on them that speedy adoption of the rule and probably passage of the bill are expected by its sponsors on the District Committee.

Disposal of the rent measure clears the track for the Sisson bill.

Representative Sisson (Democrat), New York, predicted that no one will be able to continue a filibuster so long or so successfully against his measure.

Repeal Bill Short.

Without disclosing his plan, Sisson said he felt sure that safeguards will be adopted at the beginning to prevent long delays before the House resolves itself into Committee of the Whole. Debate on the bill can be limited by majority vote of the House.

As the repeal measure is only a few lines in length, it will take but little time for the clerk to read it for amendment, even under the 5-minute rule.

As three District days remain before June 1, a House vote on the anti-red rider repeal can hardly be blocked even by a filibuster.

If Sisson's prediction of speedy action proves true, the District Committee will have time to clear its calendar of several pending minor bills as well before adjournment.

Representative to Aid Scottsboro Trial Fund

Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), California, will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting of the Washington Scottsboro Defense Committee tonight, at Metropolitan Baptist Church, in interest of a $2,000 fund to aid the Scottsboro youths in their fourth trial.

Other speakers will include William H. Hastie, Assistant Solicitor of the Interior Department; Mrs. Virginia Richardson McGuire and the Rev. A. F. Elmes. A series of public entertainments will follow the meeting.

Pal to Both

Partial Custody Settles Dog Ownership Case.

The Takoma Park, Md., dog case involving the ownership of Pal, a German Shepherd dog, was settled amicably last night along lines used in divorce cases when both parents are permitted partial custody of children.

It was agreed between the two parties in the controversy, William P. Toler and Miss Dorothy Hartle, that Toler shall be owner of the dog and that Miss Hartle may take him for a daily walk, provided she does not keep him overnight.

The warrant against Miss Hartle, sworn out by Toler, has been nolle prossed. Miss Hartle owned the dog nine years ago, at which time it became ill. Her brother asked Toler to lend him a pistol with which to shoot the dog, whereupon Toler said he would cure the animal. He was told that if he did the dog was his.

A few weeks ago, when Pal failed to come home at night, Toler found that he was at Miss Hartle's home.

Pollard Claims Pilgrims Were Really F. F. V.'s

Stephen Foster Memorial Fund Is Started Here

Mrs. Luther Johnson Sponsors Foundation as Tribute to Composer.

Stephen Collins Foster, the wistful author of "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe" and "Sewanee River," soon will have a national memorial because a little Texas girl, imbued with the sentiment and Americana of his folk songs, used to sing his ballads and love them.

The little girl has grown up now, and she is Mrs. Luther Johnson, wife of the Representative from Texas. Through her energy and enthusiasm the memorial is being organized.

The memorial will be known as the Stephen Foster Foundation. Its purpose will be the creation of a fund for the assistance of talented musicians who are in need of assistance.

"This fund," said Mrs. Johnson yesterday, "will function in the lives of talented youth. It will not be buried in stone and masonry."

An annual Foster song week will be held each year marking the anniversary of Foster's death, which occurred January 13, 1864.

The only patroness of the new organization is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who is deeply interested in the music and lore of the musician and composer, Foster.

The officers of the Foster Foundation are Dr. Walter Damrosch, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, Dr. Abram Simon, Louis G. Caldwell, Judge Claude R. Porter, John C. Kendall and John Trasker Howard, biographer of Foster. Many others in various parts of the United States are working with the Foundation.

Purse Snatcher Held After Chase

A Negro, said to have snatched three women's pocketbooks within half an hour, was arrested last night by Policeman H. H. Denear, of the Sixth Precinct after a chase on Upshur street northwest in which several shots were fired at the fleeing man.

Denear captured the man hiding under a porch of the Tuberculosis Hospital. He said that other officers who joined the chase fired at the man, but did not hit him. The suspect was booked on an investigation charge at the Sixth Precinct Station.

The pocketbooks were snatched at Thirteenth and Buchanan streets, in front of 1302 Gallatin street and on Columbia road, Denear said.

350 at Historical Dinner Hear Boasting Sons of Northwest States.

The Pilgrim Fathers landed in Virginia when they landed on Plymouth Rock, former Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia asserted last night.

"Every State in the Union, with the exception of North Dakota, Washington and Louisiana, was at one time part of Virginia," Pollard told 350 guests at an historical dinner of the Society of Virginia held in commemoration of the ceding of the Northwest Territory to the Union by his State in 1784.

The former Governor, president of the society, explained that his contentions were based on the two grants given the original colonists of the Old Dominion.

The first, by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Walter Raleigh, he said, included a territory within a 600-mile radius of Roanoke Island. This extended north to Boston and south as far as Jacksonville, Fla.

The second was the grant of James I to the settlers of Jamestown. They were given a charter for land between the thirty-fourth and forty-fifth parrallels, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Honor speakers at the dinner were representatives of the six States which later were carved out of the Northwest Territory—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Pollard called them "Virginia's northwestern daughters."

Each representative was allotted ten minutes in which to boost his own State.

Senator Robert J. Bulkfiley, of Ohio, said that between them Virginia and Ohio had produced 14 Presidents of the United States, who had served altogether 72 years, or almost half of the period since this country became a republic.

"The blending of North Carolina and Virginia blood with the puritanical strain of New England," said Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, "brought the peculiar Hoosier stock which has produced so many poets, artists, men and women of culture. There is nothing a Hoosier takes so much pride in as the cultural development of his State."

Not to be outdone by this, Representative William W. Blackney, of Michigan, told how his State had been a pioneer in public education. He said that some historians claimed Michigan was the first State to adopt a free public school system.

Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, pointed to his State's 10,000 beautiful lakes and its abundance of natural resources.

"My State," he said, "produces 70 per cent of the iron ore used in this country and 25 per cent of the world's production. One of our mines, which has been worked for 30 years, still contains more ore than the whole of Alsace-Lorraine over which France and Germany have been fighting for decades."

Representative Kent Ellsworth Keller, of Illinois, poked fun at the boasting. He asked why Virginia had not produced any Presidents recently.

"All her Presidents came during the Revolution," he said. "Do we have to wait for another revolution for a Virginia President?"

The jury freed Harry Berkeley, 53, of 18 Eighteenth street southeast, driver of the car that struck Mrs. Heinrick, when witnesses testified she walked into the street in front of his car. Berkeley said she was so small he did not see her.

Mrs. Heinrick died at her home Monday from a fractured skull suffered April 1.

Eugene Robertson, 29, Negro, of the 1100 block Columbia road northwest was absolved from blame in the death of Murphy. Witnesses told the jury Murphy walked into the street from behind parked automobiles. He died in Walter Reed Hospital Sunday.

Child Star's Fete To Aid Foundlings

A pre-birthday party in honor of Shirley Temple, child screen star, will be given at 3:30 this afternoon in the tea room at Lansburgh's department store. There will be entertainment and souvenirs for every youngster attending the party. The proceeds will go to purchase new playground equipment for the youngsters at the Washington Home for Foundlings.

Miss Temple reaches the ripe old age of 7 years next Thursday, but so that she can receive in Hollywood the huge telegram of congratulation which every child is expected to sign, on time, Lansburgh's decided to hold the party in advance. Six youngsters from the foundlings, home will be honor guests at the party.

Each child will receive an autographed photograph of Shirley Temple as well as a bag of candy.

Hasn't 'Got Around' to Considering $250,000 Asked, Bell Says.

Pigeon-Holing Hinted for Request; Needy Cases Accumulate.

Yesterday Daniel W. Bell, whose Budget Bureau, he said, slashed District health estimates because the Commissioners didn't put up enough fight, declared that he had not "got around" to considering the pending request of the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare for a supplemental appropriation of $258,000 for public relief for the balance of the present fiscal year.

Yesterday, too, the 6-month-old child of a man who has a wife and four other children to support on $24 a week, died at Gallinger Hospital of pneumonia. Because of an inadequate nursing staff the hospital was unable to supply necessary nurses for the baby.

The child did have nursing for a while. The father had saved up $25 for his April rent. This paid day and night nurses for two days. He borrowed $25 and paid for another two days. Out of his last week's pay he kept $3 for food and paid the rest to the nurses. Because he was employed he was not eligible for public help. Through his community and a church the Family Service Association obtained $18 for him. He is still without resources.

Pigeonholing Hinted.

Budget Director Bell's statement that he could not say when he would get around to consider the supplemental request contained a hint that the request might died in a pigeon-hole.

The $258,000 was asked two weeks ago. It represents the difference between the $608,000 estimated as the minimum need by the welfare board and the $350,000 appropriated by Congress.

Because the requested supplemetnal appropriation was cut to $350,000, it was necessary to cut all employables off the relief rolls effetcive April 1. Only unemployables and those families in which there are children eligible for aid under the dependentchild aid law now are receiving public help. There were 4,100 cass of employables cut off relief at the beginning of the month.

Nothing has transpired, officials said, to lead them tohope for any material change in the resulting situation.

Some Cases Desperate.

Meanwhile, relief workers in personal contact with various cases continued to report instancesof former relief clients confronted with desperate situations because relief has been stopped. Mr. J has a wife in the hospital with their third child. He is caring for the other two. He has no relatives with whom to leave the children while he hunts for even odd jobs with which to buy food. Public facilities for child care are not able to help them.

Another case was that of a WPA worker with 10 children. He receives $45 a monht. The children rnage in age form 3 to 18 years. The eldest son earns $10 a week. He contributes $5 to the family budget. Relief workers estimate adequate food for the family would cost $20.75 a week, which is more than the father makes in a week and a half. The rent is $25 a month for a five-room house. One of the children has tuberculosis. Under present conditions there is no hope it will be cured. A supplemental income of at least $43 a months is needed by the family, which faces evictino, inasumch as the public relief division had paid rent only until April 1.

The father of another family was a PA laborer until January when he fell ill from arthritis and other complictaions. He had been forbidden to work as a laborer by physicians at the clinic to which he goes regulary for treatment. The mother earns $4 a week working out two days a week. Mayor of Parkview Honored

Firemen Honor John McGrath For Hour Fight

'Mayor's' Part in Founding of Citizens Federation Is Recalled.

The Firemen's Association last night honored "Mayor" John G. McGrath, 80-year-old co-founder of the Federation of Citizens Associations, at its meeting at the Pythian Temple.

Second Battalion Chief Edward O'Connor, president of the association, introduced the genial gray-haired veteran of many a civic fight in the District in past years to the members.

"McGrath," O'Connor said, "is the man chiefly responsible for your 12-hour shift," he told the firemen. 'It was he, as head of the Park View Citizens Association, who led our battle in the citizens associations to abolish the 24-hour day."

He related the history of the modest man who was one of the civic pioneers in Washington. It was in McGrath's house that the Park View Citizens Association was founded, O'Connor recalled. So beloved was he by all the citizens of Washington that they conferred upon him the honorary title of "Mayor of Park View."

"But it is chiefly because of his help to the firemen that he is here tonight," O'Connor said. "For 20 years he was our guide and counsel. We firemen never had an important issue to bring before the people of Washington but that I went to McGrath for advice and support."

The firemen rose as a body and for several minutes applauded the bashful former Treasury employe who had retired from Washington nine years ago to the quiet of a farm in Lewistown, Md.

Ant Trick

Mann Captures Queen, and Would-Be Rescuers.

Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park, was back among the animals yesterday after a short Florida holiday. In the course of the "holiday," he helped load the menagerie train of Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circus and collected an ant colony, some fairly rare frogs and a mess of aquarium fish.

He was most enthusiastic about the ants. They are known zoologically as pogonomyrmex badius and their bite, when the attacking party is large enough, can kill a baby. The creatures are known more familiarly as agricultural, or bearded, ants.

Mrs. Mann helped the Zoo director collect them. They scraped around until they found an ant nest. Then the doctor tried a trick and it worked. Capturing the queen, he placed her in an open jar which was set into the earth. Her "court," consisting of workers and soldiers, soon noticed her predicament and came to the rescue.

Hacker Jumps To Escape Shot Of Mad Rider

Leaps From Cab Going 65 Miles an Hour; Negroes Hunted.

Evading a shot by a crazed Negro who called himself "The Kid," F. C. Williams, 30-year-old taxi driver, jumped from his cab as it was speeding at 65 miles an hour down Sargent road.

Williams, who lives at 2544 Fourteenth street northwest, said "The Kid" and another Negro hailed his cab near the Soldiers' Home. One man shoved a pistol against his back and said:

"I'm 'The Kid.' I've just been up for five years."

The pair took $6 from Williams and then forced himto drive out Sargent road as fast as his car would go. As they reached the District line, "The Kid" announced he was going to shoot Williams.

Although his cab was going at top speed, Williams in one motion opened the door and jumped. The Negro fired, but the shot missed.

Somehow, the Negroes managed to get the cab under control. Police are hunting them.

Williams went to the home of Mrs. J. H. Jeffery, of 64 Sargent road, for aid. Mrs. Jeffery summoned a neighbor, Neil Bach, who applied first aid and summoned an ambulance, which took the injured man to Casualty Hospital.

Capital Transit Changes Approved by Utility Unit

Removal of the Capital Transit Co. cross-over switch on Fifth street, between F and G streets northwest, and construction of an emergency plow pit at the end of the company's Eleventh street line, south of Monroe street, were approved in an order issued yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The changes are incident to the general track changes due to rerouting of the car system.

Glenn Dale's 4 New Units Set to Open

Additions to Children's Tuberculosis Hospital Cost $440,000.

Dedicatory Ceremonies to Be Held Saturday; Public Invited.

Four new wings to the District Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., which cost $440,000, will be dedicated formally at public ceremonies at 2:30 p. m. Saturday.

The new wings will provide an additional 150 beds for children suffering from the disease. It will bring the total of the sanatorium up to 300 beds.

The new wings, it was pointed out by Elwood Street, director of welfare, also will provide for isolation of newly admitted patients, recreation halls, auditoriums, classrooms, sun decks, expansion of the occupational therapy and a new operating room suite. The operating rooms are housed in an especially built addition on top of the original unit. Construction of the additions was begun last fall. Congress appropriated $400,000 for the buildings and $40,000 for their equipment.

Use of the recreational halls already has been begun and furniture is being moved into the other rooms and halls.

Invitation to the public to attend the dedication was extended by the Board of Public Welfare. The Rev. W. L. Darby, secretary of the Federation of Churches, will deliver the invocation. Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the welfare board, will preside. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, will make formal presentation of the new wings.

Dr. H. J. Crosson, chairman of the medical committee of the welfare board, will outline the development of the sanatorium, and Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the contagious diseases section of the health department, will discuss the relation of the sanatorium to the department's anti-tuberculosis program.

Benediction will be pronounced by the Right Rev. Mgr. John O'Grady, president of the Catholic Charities. Music will be played by the United States Army Band orchestra.

11 More Arrested In Parking Racket

Eleven more of the "watch your car, Mister?" racketeers who swarm the streets near the ball park were arrested yesterday by plainclothes policemen of the Hack Inspector's office as the drive to stamp out the practice was continued.

Meanwhile, more than a score of older persons arrested Tuesday were fined $5 by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran. The remainder of the 53 seized, most of whom were minors, were released in custody of their parents for action of Juvenile Court.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, ordered the drive with the opening of the baseball season. He described the practice as "vicious and a nuisance," and added, "the drive will continue as long as this practice goes on."

Chewning Girl Ends First Visit To Father After Separation

The younger of the two Chewning children is allowed one month with her father, William Jeffries Chewning, jr., either at Easter or at Christmas, but 5-year-old Billy stays for three months. The children went to their father at his parents' home in Fredericksburg, Va., March 15 and yesterday, after a day's visit with his mother, Billy returned with his father for the rest of his stay.

Chewning motored the children to the city yesterday and with their nurse turned them over to their mother, who waited in her car outside the Mayflower Hotel.

But that doesn't tell the story of what a grand Easter vacation the two youngsters had. Toys, hidden Easter baskets and romps in the country were all on the month's schedule. But there were no live animals in those baskets, for Chewning said he feared the children were too young to take proper care of small animals. "Dad" had even a better time than the children, he said, at the Mayflower Hotel, where he stayed yesterday.

In February, 1930, on the eve of her debut, 19-year-old Margo Couzens, daughter of Senator Couzens, of Michigan, eloped to Baltimore with Chewning. Not long before their separation last October, the Chewning house was under guard because of letters threatening to kidnap the children.

At the time Chewning took the children in March, his attorney, Alvin Newmyer, said "there is no divorce contemplated as far as I know."

Yanks' Bobbles Help Nats Stage 4-Run Rally to Triumph, 6-5

Walk Forces In Winning Marker

Linke Hit Hard; Russell Coppola Perform Creditably.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Calmly snatching a ball game away from the Yankees amid great excitement in the seventh inning yesterday, the Nats, those 20-to-1 shots in the American League pennant race, today were in possession of the league lead.

There was the little matter of a 5-to-0 deficit to be wiped out by the Nats in the late innings, but that was done almost in a twinkling and then—without striking a blow—they won the ball game, 6 to 5.

They won it in a walk, as it were—or, rather, with a walk.

The particular walk among the 11 that three Yankee pitchers issued yesterday was the walk that Carl Reynolds drew from Johnny Murphy in the eighth inning at a time when the bases were full and the score tied at 5 to 5.

Back in the sixth, the Nats had whittled the Yanks' 5-to-0 lead to 5 to 2 after Monte Pearson walked a pair of hitters, but in the seventh the Yankees almost pleaded for their licking with a gob of sloppy play.

The 6,000 customers saw Cliff Bolton institute the eighth-inning proceedings by literally knocking Pearson out of the box by bouncing a hit off the pitcher's knee. In came the hapless Murphy to be saluted by Pinch-Hitter Johnny Stone with a double to centerfield that put Bolton on third. And when Red Rolfe at third base bobbled Hill's grounder to fill the bases, the situation became downright serious for the Yanks.

The rally sagged in the middle when Ossie Bluege watched a perfect third strike cross the plate, but it was on in full cry in another moment, when Buddy Myer bashed a clean single into center to score two runners and reduce the figures to 5 to 4.

At this point, with Jake Powell at bat, Leftfielder Roy Johnson staged a great exhibition of how not to catch a fly ball. At the crack of Powell's bat, Johnson was under way—but in the wrong direction. The ball, it seems, was over Johnson's head, not over the infield, but that was an item that he had quite overlooked. Any way, it went for a two-base hit. Hill scored the tying run and Myer was on third base with the winning run.

At this point, Manager McCarthy chose to pass the dangerous Cecil Travis, who had already made two hits, and fill the bases for double-play purposes, but business became habit-forming with Pitcher Murphy, and he pitched four balls to Reynolds to lose the ball game.

The Nats were a lucky ball team yesterday. The Yankees happily got Ed Linke out of there for 'em before he could completely wreck Washington's chances. They failed to induce Linke to leave after Chapman banged him on his pitching hand with a line drive through the box in the fourth inning, but after he had given 'em three runs in the fourth and another in the fifth, he retired.

While four Yankee double plays were cutting the Nats down in the first six innings, saving the disastrous consequences of the seven walks Pearson issued, the Yanks were raising hob with Linke.

They picked up a run in the second inning when Dickey tripled to center and Chapman followed with a double to the same spot, and they upped their margin to 4-0 in the fourth when Selkirk singled, Chapman singled, Lazzeri doubled and Crosetti doubled.

They went right to work against

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Clark Griffith, who could stoop to as shady a trick on the pitching mound as any man who ever pulled on a glove, has worked himself into a fine state of outrage at the refusal of League President Harridge to permit Pitcher Ed Linke to use the chemical heating pad that Linke claims is necessary for blood circulation in his mysteriously-ill pitching hand.

POVICH.

I quote from Griffith's snorting yesterday in his Griffith Stadium office when he learned that Harridge had officially frowned on Linke's gadget:

"'S ridiculous. I never did hear of such foolishness. What do they want to do, take that poor boy's livelihood away from him? He needs something to warm his fingers in cold weather. If they don't let Linke use that heating gadget, then they ought to take the spectacles away from those fellows who use 'em. It's the same thing—a physical handicap and they ought to make allowances.

"How in the world could a pitcher cheat with a little heating pad. I told Mr. Harridge that the umpires could inspect it any time they wanted to and if they caught Linke doing anything wrong I'd take the responsibility. This ruling isn't final, though. I made Mr. Harridge promise that he'd take a vote of all the league presidents before he'd rule out Linke's gadget permanently. I'm not through with this business."

Mr. Griffith's views notwithstanding, the rules applying to the case are very definite. They specifically forbid a pitcher to carry any foreign substance to the mound, which ought to cover heating pads or needles or plows. The aim, of course, is to guard against treatment of the ball that would give the pitcher a better grip or disfigure it in such a way that eccentric or unorthodox curves would develop.

The rule went into effect coincident with the ruling out of freak deliveries—Eddie Cicotte's shine ball, the emery ball achieved by roughening the cover with emery paper; the spitball and the various other peculiar pitches that the fertile minds of the hurlers evolved.

Clark Griffith used his own individual methods to beat the rules, although they were not as rigidly enforced in the heyday of his pitching. The Nats' owner did not earn the soubriquet of "Old Fox" because he was a smart or clever manager or something of a David Harum in his player trades. He was labeled the Old Fox because of his habit of roughening the ball on his spikes while taking his wind-up and thus making the pitch take fancy hops.

But if the American League pooh-bahs are going to rigidly enforce the pitching rules as they appear to be doing in Linke's case then they ought to go the whole hog and take action against some of the obvious violations throughout the league.

There are a half-dozen pitchers in the American League, notably Rube Walberg, who bring the palm of their pitching hands across the sweat of their brow and thus find themselves equipped with all the elements of a spitball. The perspiration they gather in with their hands is easily transmitted to the ball and the spitball that was ruled out a decade and a half ago is still with us.

There were folks, too, who always claimed that Fred Marberry did things to the ball that were not strictly kosher. Given a new ball out there on the mound, Marberry was always seen squeezing it between his palms before he pitched, and it was no gentle squeeze, either. There are some who say that Marberry actually loosened the stitches on the cover with the great strength he was able to apply and thus get all the effects of a dry spitter.

Second Day Sidelights

By Lewis F. Atchison.

There's no place so dismal as the ball park on the second day of the season, and few places so empty. A vast sweep of untenanted seats already beginning to collect dust fill the amphitheater and re-echo in hollow tones the shouts of the players and the few souls in the stands.

Where yesterday 31,000 fans—a record throng—fought with abandon to squeeze through the swarming turnstiles and then through aisles alive with humanity and finally into tight-fitting seats, all is calmly quiet. Sparrows hop around the iron supporting beams and can be heard above the mild din of the 6,000 present. Even the pigeons are unruffled—the same pigeons that floated gracefully to the infield during one game of the 1933 world series and momentarily disrupted play, and who fled before Tuesday's raucous noises.

The cops are missing, too. Maj. Brown disguised in plain clothes, Capt. Ed Kelly, the movie-type captain, the lieutenants, sergeants and buck privates are back on their beats. The only gold braid in the place is an imitation decoration adorning the ushers' uniforms.

The news-reel photographers and corps of still photographers are conspicuously absent, and the only shutter-flicking of the afternoon can be traced to the local dailies. There may be four photographers in the place, whereas the day before saw 40 flitting about the premises, poking their magical boxes at everything and everybody.

You can even get a seat in the press box. Nobody stumbles over one foot, steps squarely on the other and mumbles, "Sorry," nobody yells, "Put Estelella in there," or "Whattsa matter, holdout?" Nobody spills peanut shells down the back of your neck, and you don't have to pass score cards and soda pop to the guy two seats on your left, and then pass the dime back to the salesboy. You can stretch your feet and actually enjoy the game.

Gumbert Stops Dodgers, 5-3, With 4 Hits

Game Halted in Second While Bartell, Mungo Swap Punches.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 15.—A 22-year-old youngster, right-handed Harry Gumbert, today pitched a four-hit game against the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Giants won the second straight game from the Dodgers, 5 to 3.

Gumbert, purchased by the Giants from Baltimore late last season, pitched hitless ball for five innings and was never in danger, as the Giants scored all five of their runs in the first four innings.

The game was halted in the second inning when Dick Bartell and Van Lingle Mungo took time out to trade punches. Bartell tripped crossing first base and immediately swung on Mungo, whom he thought had tripped him intentionally. The fight was broken up by the players and both Mungo and Bartell were ordered from the game.

Bill Terry seems to have found a successor to himself at first base. Sam Leslie got three hits in four times up yesterday.

Goodman Goes To Semifinals In Golf Play

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 15.—A ball that hung on the lip of the eighteenth hole cup after a 12-foot putt, gave Johnny Goodman a one-up decision over Robert E. Barbour, of Paterson, N. J., today, and a place in the semi-finals of the Mason-Dixon golf tournament.

Barbour gave the former National Open champion a close battle all the way.

Both failed to get on the green with their tee shots at the par 3 eighteenth, but Goodman pitched to within 6 feet. His opponent's ball rolled 12 feet away from the cup. Barbour missed by fractions of an inch but Goodman tapped his own ball in easily.

Jack Davison, of Long Meadow, Mass., 1924-25 champion and Jack Ryerson, of Cooperstown, N. Y., also twice a winner of the championship, fought a see-saw battle until the seventeenth, where Davison won the hole and match 2 up and 1 to play.

Davison will meet Page Hufty, of Washington, a former North-South titlist, who put out Harrison Smith, of Oklahoma City, 6 and 5.

Fred Perry K. O.'d.

Budapest, April 15 (AP).—Fred Perry, Great British tennis star, was knocked out today when struck over the eye by a ball during an exhibition doubles match. He quickly recovered and resumed play.

Haynes K.O.'s Brown in 2d Round

Negro Heavy Has Little Trouble Finishing Local Fighter.

Kirk Burke, Once Amateur Champ Here, K. O.'d in Prelim.

By Bill McCormick.
A Staff Correspondent.

The Arena, Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—The dry rot of ring idleness and dangerous fists of Leroy Haynes—or something — ended the fighting career of Natie Brown here tonight as the former District heavyweight champion was knocked out in the second round by a barrage of apparently ineffectual blows swung by the latest Negro heavyweight sensation.

Natie was counted out after 2 minutes and 48 seconds of the second round of the scheduled 10-rounder after he had wilted under a steady fire of lefts and rights fired at him in a neutral corner over the writer's head, all of which he seemed to have effectively blocked.

Some 6,000 of Philadelphia's fistically faithful watched the proceedings—and many of them hooted and jeered at the unsatisfactory finish. The gross gate receipts approximated $9,000.

Brown Overweight.

Festooned with blubber about his midsection, Brown weighed 212 pounds—more than 25 pounds more than he weighed when he made his gallant ten-round stand against Joe Louis some ten months ago. Despite the handicap of the surplus avoirdupois, Brown was doing a fairly good job of demonstrating that Haynes is not in a class with Louis when the peculiar finish was recorded.

Throughout the first round Natie had ducked and bobbed away from all of Haynes' soporific socks, at the same time pounding away at the well-built Negro's midsection in close and bedeviling him no little by spurts of reckless mitten-flinging. Haynes did little better than hold Brown even during that three-minute session of fisticuffing.

Brown was doing even better in the second round—until the untimely finish. He seemed to have grown more courageous and stood toe to toe with the ebon-hued first-flipper in several furious exchanges which aroused the expectations of the assemblage.

The end came as Haynes pumped both hands furiously in the general

District Boy K. O.'s First Opponent

3 Other Local Entries Beaten in National Championships.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 15.—Lou Gevinson, District Olympic club lightweight, tonight dynamited his way into the third round of the National A. A. U. senior boxing championships by kayoing his first opponent and soundly trouncing the second one.

While Gevinson was blasting his way with little trouble, three other Washington boys fell by the wayside.

Robert Sill, of the Carolina Association, the Capital entry's first rival, badly outclassed, was saved from a first-round knockout by the bell. A hard right to the jaw spilled the Southern boy for a six count in the second and another barrage sent him down for nine in the next round.

Gevinson, shooting deadly rights to the head, knocked White down for a count of four in the second round and opened a cut under his opponent's eye in the third.

A steady barrage of lefts and rights to the head forced White to cover up repeatedly and Gevinson had little trouble winning.

Pickerel, using a left jab, kept his hard-hitting foe off balance in the first round, but was clipped on the jaw with a wild right in the second stanza and almost went down.

Fairchild forced the fighting in the last round and connected with enough body blows to earn the decision.

A right to the body had the Midwest boxer gasping for air about a minute before the bout ended, but Pickerel failed to take advantage of the situation.

Mathias Drops Verdict.

Robert Mathias, Washington welterweight, dropped a split-hair decision to Sid Pesson, Southern Association, in a bout that drew the gaze of all the fans, despite the fact that two other scraps were going on at the same time.

Utilizing a left to keep the charging Pesson off balance and flicking right crosses to the jaw, Mathias won the first round and held his opponent even in the second.

They battled furiously in the third stanza and judges awarded the verdict to Pesson after he had driven the District of Columbia battler into the ropes with a stiff left.

Harold Dettman, Cleveland light-heavyweight champion who is now fighting as a middleweight, pounded out a decision over Creighton Allen, Capital City boy, in a bout that was marred by holding tactics.

Allen made an attempt to keep Dettman at open range and undoubtedly would have triumphed had he been able to protect himself in the clinches, but Dettman ripped scores of blows to Allen's midsection and piled up enough points to offset a late rally by the District of Columbia boxer.

Friends Netmen Beats Montgomery Blair High

Friends Prep and Montgomery Blair High Schools opened their respective tennis seasons yesterday on the Friends court with the hosts turning in a 4 to 1 victory, sweeping the singles matches and splitting the doubles. Arentson and Groves won the only match for the Silver Springites, defeating Schultz and McBride in a torrid three-set match, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4. Jenkins, of the losers, took but one game from Newmyer, host captain.

Results:

Newmyer defeated Jenkins, 6—0, 6—1; Spear defeated Witherspoon, 6—2, 7—5; Bunar defeated Arentson, 6—1, 6—1; Spear and Newmyer defeated Witherspoon and Jenkins, 6—2, 6—0; Arentson and Groves (Blair) defeated Schultz and McBride, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

6-Year-Old Quadruplets Enter Diamond Careers

Beaumont, Tex., April 15 (AP).—The world's only male quadruplets, A, B, C and D Perricone, 6½ years old, will launch their baseball careers at the Texas League park here tomorrow.

A batting and throwing exhibition in front of the stands will give this potential "million dollar infield" its first test before a critical crowd.

The fun-loving lads will be watched closely from the time of their initial appearance until they show definitely whether they have what it takes to make good ball players.

PETE APPLETON.

Pete Appleton Faces Yanks Today

Nats' Veteran Rookie Will Oppose Red Ruffing in Series Finale.

Back in the big leagues after two previous failures, Pete Appleton today makes his debut in a Washington uniform when he takes the mount against the Yankees in the final game of the current series.

The 31-year-old right-hander, who under the name of Jablonowski, formerly had trials with the Indians and Yankees, now ranks high in the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris.

The leading pitcher in the International League with his 22 victories and 7 defeats for Montreal last season, Appleton finds himself in the opening series of the season as the result of his impressive work in the South.

Earl Whitehill's injured finger on his pitching hand, suffered against Albany in an exhibition game last week, has disrupted Harris' pitching plans for the first week of the season, but the Nats' manager has high hopes that Appleton will be a regular performer.

The ball thrown by Ossie Bluege in the opening game on Tuesday, failed to fracture Buck Newsom's jaw or otherwise seriously injure him, but it did put the big pitcher on a liquid diet. Beyond a sore jawbone and his inability to chew solid foods, Newsom has shown no ill effects. He is expected to pitch within a week.

Haynes Flattens Brown in Second

direction of Brown's head. Numerous seconds before Referee Joe McGuigan started to count him out, Brown was stunned by the first clean punch Haynes landed—a terrific left hook to the head. Instinctively, Natie went into his familiar shell, covering his head with his gloved fists.

Haynes shot, one, two, three, a dozen—two dozen punches at the gloves which stood between Brown and terrific punishment. Natie peeked furtively from behind his gloves for a way out. He found it by sticking his head out of the ropes, just as he had when Louis was punishing him too severely.

The referee intervened, pulling Haynes away from the unwilling Brown. After the break, Brown charged recklessly into the Negro, catching him half off-guard by the sheer ferocity of his attack. Haynes braced himself, ducked under a couple of wild swings and again drove Brown into the neutral corner.

Once he had pinioned Natie in the corner, Haynes seemed to realize that the kill was imminent. He fired both hands at his weaving, bobbing opponent who, as an added measure of safety, had again gone into his crablike shell. Many terrific blows rained on Brown's gloves, but none seemed to find a vital spot.

Suddenly—and, without warning Brown's legs began to sag. He dropped to the floor and McGuigan started the dolorous toll as Haynes jogged contentedly to the farthest corner.

"1, 2, 3, 4," intoned the referee.

"Get up!" yelled most of the crowd.

McGuigan finished the fatal count before Brown dragged himself from the resin dust—apparently still very dazed. Still in the same condition, he was led to his corner, where he began to make explanations to his handlers.

Weighing an even 200 pounds, Haynes seemed just another, a better than average heavyweight, but one who could be beaten by any good boxer or very courageous and rugged fighter. Taking into consideration the difference in the Brown of tonight and the Brown who fought Louis, one would judge that Haynes would last but a few rounds with the Brown Bomber.

Says Didn't Hear Count.

Both Brown and his manager, Billy McCarney, claimed after the fight that the knocked-out fighter had not heard the count.

"I thought the referee had counted to eight," insisted Natie after the bout in explanation of the knockout.

Kirk Burke, former District amateur heavyweight champion, was knocked cold by one Lou Berg, of Pittsburgh, in the third round of a preliminary to the Leroy Haynes-Natie Brown bout here tonight.

Burke made a valiant stand against his big opponent, who outweighed him 21½ pounds, before bowing out three rounds before the scheduled end of the contest.

Tennis Pros At Md. Gym Tonight

Vines, Lott, Stoefen and Bell Play Singles and Doubles.

Four of the greatest tennis players in the world will exhibit their wares at Ritchie Coliseum tonight when Promoter Bill O'Brien brings Ellsworth Vines, Lester Stoefen, George Lott and Berkeley Bell to Maryland University for a doubles match and a pair of singles battles.

Vines, world professional champion, will be pitted against Stoefen, former national amateur doubles titleholder, in the first singles match. Both men are Californians and, like Maury McLoughlin, the old California Comet, believe in speed and more speed.

Immediately following the Vines-Stoefen affair, Lott, generally conceded to be the greatest doubles master of all time, will cross racquets with Bell, the diminutive but hard-hitting Texan.

Clash in Doubles.

In the doubles match Vines and Bell are to clash with Lott and Stofen. All matches will be the best 3 out of 5 sets.

Tom Mangan, former District champion; A. O. White and Tom Frydell will act as umpires and a number of well-known local netmen are to hold down the lines. Bill Coyle, popular radio sports commentator, has consented to introduce the various net stars publicly.

Tickets may be procured at Spaldings and the Hecht Co. until 6 p. m. today. Prices range from $1.50 to $1.00, plus tax, with a special student admission listed at 55 cents for athletic association members.

Yank Bobbles Help Nats to Win, 6 to 5

Linke also in the fifth when Rolfe and Selkirk singled with one out. At this point, Jack Russell succeeded Linke and would have turned back the Yanks scoreless except for Buddy Myer's momentary fumble of a double-play ball.

The Nats got back in the ball game in the sixth after Pearson had walked Myer and Powell. Travis scored Myer and sent Powell to third with a single to center and Powell scored while Reynolds was hitting into the Yanks' fourth double-play.

You know what happened in the seventh; but a word about the Nats' relief pitching: Jack Russell and Henry Coppola held the Yanks to three hits and no runs in those last four and two-third innings, Russell was never in danger but Coppola had his troubles. He outrode a mild storm in the eighth when Chapman and Lazzeri singled with two out, but Bluege rescued him with a sparkling play on Crosetti's grounder, and in the ninth he was saved again by superb defensive play.

Horton Smith Reels Off 30; Amazes Prep School Golfers

By Dave Herman.

Horton Smith was just one of the boys yesterday.

Never one to high hat a kid golfer, and long one of the biggest supporters of junior golf, the celebrated 28-year-old Joplin Ghost unraveled his skill in an exhibition match at Georgetown Prep School's course, and later in the afternoon turned public speaker.

Smith, now an unattached professional, a member of Spalding's staff, gave convincing proof of his golf prowess by shooting a record-smashing 30 over the gently rolling Garrett Park course.

The tall, good-looking Missourian whose golf game is as delightful to look at as his smile, teamed with 15-year-old Buddy Sharkey, Gonzaga Prep ace, to defeat those two Congressional pals, Billy Shea, District and Metropolitan Schoolboy champion, and Billy Dettweiler, 4 and 3, in a nine-hole match.

Horton wanted to play more, but the 100 some schoolboy golfers who trailed him around the course, after marveling at this man's powerful tee shots, his crisp irons and that magician-like putting stroke, wanted to hear what he had to say about golf.

Smith's 30 clipped one stroke off the course record. It included six birdies. He was over par only on the second, where he missed the green with his second. On the fourth, a 335-yarder uphill, Horton planted his tee shot 6 feet to the right of the pin, and just missed his eagle.

More astonishing was his tee shot on the 130-yard eighth. Here he arched an iron to within 4 inches of the pin—almost a hole-in-one.

Dettweiler had a 35, Sharkey a 36 and Shea 38.

Smith stressed "swinging the clubhead" in his lecture. He said that Ernest Jones, New York golf teacher, had done much to simplify the game with his slogan, "Swing the clubhead." Bobby Jones movies accompanied the lecture.

Smith was Wiffy Cox's guest last night.

Japanese Pros To Play in Golf Match Here

Washington's first big exhibition match of the season will occur today at 3 p. m. at Kenwood Golf and Country Club, with Wiffy Cox, host pro, and Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, meeting the two Japanese pro stars, Torchy Toda and Chick Chin.

Quite a crowd, including some 300 Kenwood members, is expected for the 18-hole match.

Yesterday the Nipponese pros instructed a group of players from the Japanese Embassy at Kenwood.

All municipal golfers of Washington interested in organizing a District Public Links Golf Association have been requested to attend a meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at East Potomac's clubhouse. Ed Burns, Rock Creek manager; B. Harry Graham, East Potomac manager; S. G. Loeffler, local concessionaire; Mel Shorey, East Potomac pro; Al Price, of Rock Creek, and Win Johnson, of the Welfare Recreation Association, will be among those present.

Manor Club women will open their competitive golf season this morning with a penny-a-putt tournament. An all-day program has been planned.

Leo Walper won a professional challenge match from Reds Cunningham, of Burning Tree, yesterday by scoring a 72 at Washington Golf and Country Club. Cunningham shot a 74. Tuesday, Walper had a 73 and Cunningham a 78 at Burning Tree.

Mako Eliminated In Tennis Upset

Pinehurst, N. C., April 15 (AP).—Gene Mako, Davis Cup player and seeded No. 4, was eliminated today in the men's singles of the North and South tennis tournament in a day of upsets which also saw Norma Taubele, seeded No. 1 in the women's singles, fall by the wayside.

Mako, who arrived here only today from the United States-Mexico zone series at Houston, Tex., advanced easily through the second and third rounds after drawing a first-round bye, but could not withstand the attack of Hal Surface, of Kansas City, who was unseeded. The score was 4—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Don Budge, the California redhead and another Davis Cup star, won two easy victories after getting a first-round bye and a second-round default and safely entered the semifinals.

Sarron-Miller Opposites In Descent

Syrian and German Will Meet in Title Clash Here on May 11.

When Petey Sarron makes his bid for the world featherweight boxing championship against Freddie Miller at Griffith Stadium on May 11 it will be another clash of fighting nationalities.

Although both men are Americans, they represent opposites in descent. The challenger is the only fighter of Syrian parentage who is prominent in the ring. Rugged and swarthy, he would need only a head dress, a camel and a background of palms and desert to make him look like a warlike shiek.

Originally named Friederich Mueller, the title holder, is of German extraction. Miller is not the first of the outstanding Germans in the boxing game. A survey shows that there have been successful Teutons in every weight division except welterweight.

In the heavyweight class is, of course, Max Schmeling, former world champion. Paul Berlenbach and Sailor Burke (Karl Prasse) once dominated the lightweights.

A veritable flurry of Germans have shown to advantage in the middleweight class. There were such men as Harry Greb, Billy Papke, Frank Klaus and Leo Houk.

In the lightweight class the records show two champions of Teutonic descent. Adolph Wolgast won the title from Battling Nelson and then lost it to Willie Ritchie, whose real name was Gerhardt Steffen.

Hodgson Wins D. C. Diving Crown

Reginald Hodgson, of Shoreham, easily won the 1936 District Amateur Athletic Union indoor low-board diving championship before nearly 500 spectators last night in the Ambassador Hotel pool. Tallying 99 7-10 points, he succeeds Johnny Broaddus, who did not compete this year.

In the women's division, Marie Duvall was extended to the limit by youthful Anne Arnson, of Ambassador, before crashing through to her second consecutive title. The comely Shoreham lass scored 75.32 points to lead Miss Arnson by a scant 4½ marks. Betty Everett, of Shoreham, took third place.

Peanuts Jordon, of Ambassador, smashed the 220-yard freestyle record, clipping 3 1-10 seconds off the mark established last year by Ernie Boggs. Jordon navigated the distance in 2 minutes and 27 seconds flat. Second place went to Ken Kinsella, of Y. M. C. A., while his teammate, Al Jenkins, came in third.

The outstanding individual performer of the meet was little Anne Arnson, whose recent development has startled close followers of the sport. Besides finishing second to Marie Duvall in the diving, Miss Arnson won the 100-yard backstroke in 1 minute and 16 4-5 seconds and placed third in the 50-yard freestyle.

Men's Events.

Oliveri Reaches Semifinals In Rock Creek Golf Tourney

Andy Oliveri, chubby-faced, steady plodding District junior municipal golf champion, played some of the hottest golf of his career yesterday to reach the semifinals of the Rock Creek spring tournament.

In fine fettle, approaching and putting like a wizard, the Roosevelt High School star shot a 68, one over par, in eliminating 15-year-old Billy Leapley, 7 and 6.

When Oliveri ended the match on the twelfth green he was even par, after going out in 35. He shot the back nine in one under par.

Others who moved into the semifinals were W. W. Seay, medalist; Bob Leapley, winner of the Rock Creek relief tournament, and Bill Wilhelm.

The stage this morning is set for a match between Seay and Oliveri and Leapley and Wilhelm. The finals will be held tomorrow.

Only one final was completed yesterday. Al Nelson, veteran proof-reader on The Washington Post, swamped G. F. Gibbs, 5 and 3, to win the fourth flight.

Vanderbilt Stable's Postage Due Wins Havre de Grace Feature

Stablemate Is Third In Field

7,000 Attend; Daily Double Pays $225; Finisher Wins.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 15.—The Grade A Handicap that occupied the feature spot on the Harford Agricultural & Breeders Association program today proved little more than a workout for a pair of Vanderbilt horses. Postage Due and Speed to Spare, representing the young millionaire's stable, finished first and third in the 6-furlong dash and then were kept in action after the finish to stage a mile trial. Between the two came Felix Spatola's Wise Prince to take second money, which appeared to be a gift, for Jockey Fallon did not push Speed to Spare once he was assured that Postage Due and Jockey Johnny Bejshak had the situation well in hand.

Postage Due was credited with the best 6-furlong time of the meeting to date, running the route in 1:12 1-5 and having a two-and-a-half-length margin over Wise Prince. The latter was three parts of a length ahead of Speed to Spare.

Weather bordering on summer-made racing conditions most pleasant and the track was fast. Some 7,000 turned out for the sport and indulged in the game of "odds, odds who's got the odds" as played by the display board here.

Postage Due probably is a much better colt than the race shows. He broke on top, but was promptly taken under stout restraint while Speed to Spare was rushed into the lead. Bejshak continued to have a strong grip on Postage Due until it was apparent that Wise Prince, running on the outside, would figure in the finish.

Inside the eighth pole. Bejshak decided to let Postage Due run and when he did the race was over for all but the pay-off purposes. Wise Prince tried his darndest, but was not good enough. Accolade, Vote Boy and Broker's Tip, former Derby winner, failed to figure in the important running.

The Vanderbilt forces also had a hand in the production of a $225 daily double pay off, supplying Malispina, winner of the front end. The wager was completed, very naturally, by Finisher.

The Vanderbilt forces and the favorite players were off to a running start when Malispina made it three straight victories in her short career by taking the opening sprint for juveniles. She forged to the front soon after the break and fought a willing battle with Ejector through the stretch. Jeanne Fetzko was third in the field of nine. Malispina paid $5.40.

Epitaph and Singing Heart waged a merry battle throughout the 6 furlongs of the second race with the Epinard gelding earning the close decision. Building Trades was a well beaten third. Cliff Stafford, on Epitaph, appeared to have outridden Carl Hanford in the closing stages. Epitaph rewarded with a $9.60 mutuel.

Finisher, a son of Jack High and ridden by Apprentice A Schmidl, a newcomer hereabouts, won third race at a $32.50 mutuel. He had a daylight lead on Pomposity, a Vanderbilt horse. Dogmata and Dowdy Dell, which drew principal play, were not prominent in the early running but the former managed to save third money.

Corum, owned by Mrs. A. J. Abel and trained by her husband, won the fifth race by seven lengths from the Vanderbilt Stable's Fez. Fairest Flag was third. Corum followed the pace of Fez into the stretch, took command at his rider's asking and was only galloping at the end. Kapena, rushed off his hoofs here the other day, was under restraint today for 6 furlongs while within striking distance of the leaders. When called upon he bounced to the front and won as far as you can throw a stone. It was a popular victory at a $5.30 mutuel. Jamul and Sleek were second and third.

The day's finale brought an upset when Canimar defeated Dutch Uncle to pay a $26.90 mutuel. Ross was a fast-closing third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MALISPINA, $5.40, $3.50, $2.50; EJECTOR, $4.20, $3.30; JEANNE FETZKO, $6.00.

MALISPINA, hustled hard to gain command after the opening sixteenth, rallied nicely when placed to punishment in the closing furlong and, holding on stoutly, barely lasted to stall off EJECTOR. Latter forced a steady pace while in pursuit of the winner, offered bold challenges during the last quarter-mile, but failed to improve his position. JEANNE FETZKO worked her way up on outside after being shuffled back going to the first turn and finished gamely. FLAMING BELLE went prominently for the first half-mile, then weakened. QUEEN FULL suffered much interference at the turn out of the backstretch. She recovered and closed full of run. ROBINS COVE showed a flash of speed in the first quarter-mile. VIVOLA tired suddenly. PASS 'EM BY broke slowly and lacked speed at all times. TULEYRIES RUBY met with slight interference when leaving the backstretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:02. Winner, T. F. Sword's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EPITAPH, $9.60, $4.10, $3.40; SINGING HEART, $4.10, $3.50; BUILDING TRADES, $4.30.

EPITAPH, hurried stoutly to take command in the first quarter-mile, rallied strongly when placed to punishment reaching the homestretch, withstood a hard drive willingly and just lasted to stall off SINGING HEART. Latter, in the thick of contention from the beginning, drew on almost even terms with the winner in the closing furlong and fought it out strongly to the finish. BUILDING TRADES improved his position on the outside, entered contention when reaching the homestretch and held on well. BUBBLING SPRING followed in close pursuit of the leaders for five furlongs, but tired fast in the last quarter-mile. GENIE PALATINE was squeezed back leaving the backstretch, and could not menace thereafter. WATERSET was never forcibly. GOLDEN SEPTRE was unable to reach contention at any stage. The others were outrun.

*Field.

FINISHER, going forwardly in the early stages while under slight restraint, moved to the leaders when straightened into the homestretch, took command in nice fashion and came out slowly under pressure approaching the finish. POMPOSITY obtained racing room on the inside when improving his position, rallied nicely under strong urging and finished with good courage. DOGMATA went in the first flight while being outpaced, swung to the outside when put to a drive and closed gamely. MASKED GAL had good speed while setting the early pace, but gave way to PRINCE PETTIE and weakened after being placed to punishment in the stretch drive. SUNNED could not reach a contending position early, but was making up ground steadily at the end. SOME GOOD showed a flash of early speed. DOWDY DELL broke slowly and was never prominent. The others were never factors.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Grade A Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:09½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's ch. c. (3), by Hightime—Postage. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POSTAGE DUE (entry), $3.60, $2.10, $2.10; WISE PRINCE, $2.70, $2.70; SPEED TO SPARE (entry), $2.10.

POSTAGE DUE, taken under steady restraint after breaking fast, followed SPEED TO SPARE under steadying restraint until reaching the homestretch, took command without effort when mildly shaken up and drew out at his leisure nearing the finish. He and SPEED TO SPARE were worked out a mile. WISE PRINCE, moved up forcibly when leaving the backstretch, responded to punishment, but was no match for the winner. SPEED TO SPARE showed high speed while setting the pace, saved ground and held on well. ACCOLADE broke sluggishly and could not menace at any stage. BROKER'S TIP was never a factor. VOTE BOY was done after going half a mile.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:44½. Winner, Mrs. A. J. Abel's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORUM, $7.80, $4.80, $3.50; FEZ, $6.60, $4.50; FAIREST FLAG, $3.30.

CORUM, going in his best form and a keen factor in the early racing, challenged strongly nearing the homestretch, disposed of FEZ in the last furlong and drew out into a long lead at the close. FEZ, showing improvement, outran his field to the first turn, was rated until forced to a drive, but was no match for the winner. FAIREST FLAG, kept under pressure all during the early stages, finished gamely when placed to punishment. BUSBY weakened after moving up at the final turn while on the inside. TERRY ON went evenly. STROPHE was never able to reach a contending position. BYRDRYE was never a factor. THISTLE AIR was steered wide for the entire trip.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:17. Winner, W. Zakoor's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAPENA, $5.60, $2.90, $2.30; JAMUL, $4.50, $2.70; SLEEK, $2.50.

KAPENA, reserved back of the leaders for the first six furlongs, obtained racing room on the inside when moving into the lead entering the homestretch, drew clear and increased his advantage readily. JAMUL, rated forwardly until leaving the backstretch, assumed a slight lead midway of the turn, but could not withstand the winner when shaken up. SLEEK, slower than usual to settle in her stride, bettered her position on the outside and closed stoutly while inclined to lug toward the inside during the stretch drive. EDDIE G. was tired and gradually after being overhauled. PRINCE PETTIE went strongly for six furlongs, then weakened. IRISH VOTE could not threaten. HOT GRIDDLE had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:49. Winner, T. F. Sword's ch. c (4), by Bucellas—Fair Cuba. Trained by G. Mayberry. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42 2-5, 1:55 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANIMAR, $26.90, $11.60, $5.90; DUTCH UNCLE, $5.50, $3.60; ROSS, $4.00.

CANIMAR moved into a contending position between horses on the backstretch, gradually wore down MAD FRUMP in the stretch and had enough left to hold DUTCH UNCLE safe. The latter under steadying restraint in the early racing, responded well when called upon in the stretch and was wearing the winner down. ROSS trailed the field early, but closed well under his weight. MAD FRUMP, well up from the start, disposed of CLOSE CALL after assuming a short lead when leaving the backstretch, but faltered at end. TAUNTON could never engage the leaders. CLOSE CALL and DANCING CLOUD stopped.

Havre De Grace Race Track, Md., April 15.

Dear Al:

This track is setting something of a record for jockey and weight corrections. I will not worry you by going over the entire program, but it might be interesting to check on the first race. Of the nine horsese that started, only two were not involved in some sort of change. Five horses were carrying overweight jockeys and two others showed a shift in riders after the program was printed. Of course, these changes are posted and announced but they are confusing and "over the heads" of many of the non-regulars in the crowd. Then again professional and amateur handicappers have wasted their time, if they figure by the weights as given in the entries. Then again, the early jockeys are a joke. For instance, today Pass 'Em By was scheduled to have C. Reid aboard. The program had him as the rider. But the change was made to Grigg. The regulars noted the fact, but the money poured in on the Grayson colt. If Grigg can ride, I'm the 1936 jockey champion and I'm afraid to get within kicking distance of a merry-go-round.

BILL.

First Race—Light Brook is dropping a bit and may triumph in this cheap field. Gets in with only steadying weight. Popo should go well here. Comes off a sprint. Sun Abbot for the show. Just Remember might be prominent on an off track.

Second race—Shepherd Boy has worked well enough to warrant a selection in this sort of company. He needs only to improve slightly on his trials. Proteus figures to be close, especially if the mud comes up. Chiliad for the show.

Third race—Hats Off, a bang-up second last out, may get home on top of this group. He will have Seven Star, a brisk worker, to beat. Fight Talk is highly touted and has some chance, as has Miss Twinkle.

Fifth race—Naval Cadet came through with a smashing second in a sprint here and may be ready to hold One Chance and Buck Langhorne safe. Xandra is rounding into form, but I don't fancy the spot.

Sixth race—I'm going to stick to Dalmatia here. This one was running in front until his tongue hung out the other day. Wants to come from behind. A rating ride may find him winning. Abbot's Last and Overstimulate for the other awards.

Seventh race—Palasa gets the call on Florida racing. Thruster won decisively last out and is the one to beat. Happy Flag, winner at Bowie, to take care of the others.

Best bet—Naval Cadet.

Graw Grits

Havre de Grace, Md., April 15.—Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, has gone to work for Trainer J. P. ("Doc") Jones . . . and probably will ride in New York this summer . . . the camera finish people promise to show the pictures to the public in the future . . . but they have not promised to supply magnifying glasses . . . perhaps I saw a horse today that appeared to be running from a battery . . . and perhaps I didn't . . . Suncrax and Frisco were placed on the schooling list this morning . . . and anybody who saw them act up would say that they earned their places . . . the horses were working out in droves on the track this morning . . . one of the best moves was that of Phantom Fox, a candidate for Saturday's $10,000 added Chesapeake . . . he stepped a mile in 1:42 2-5 . . . a light rain fell, but it did not slow the track . . . just to show that my heart's in the right place, I'll report that Bill had four winners yesterday . . . and Singing Heart, my special, was beaten a nose by Bill's pick, Epitaph . . . Postage Due, nominated by Vanderbilt for the Derby and Preakness, may cut a figure in both races . . . he was going easily in working out after yesterday's win . . . Jockey Bobby Merritt, who rode Cycle to victory in Jamaica's feature yesterday, traveled from Baltimore to New York by boat for the race . . . I don't mean to hint that it was a "boat" race . . . in fact, Merritt said he thought he would win it before he left here . . . the horse Peppery that Mrs. Bosley sent to the post yesterday might be a good one . . . he looks like a smaller edition of her ill-fated Chase Me . . . Peppery ran greenly and wore the same "Martingale" (a leather gadget to keep the horse from throwing his head too high) that Chase Me once sported . . . Kearsage, scheduled to start tomorrow in the third race, is nicely bred, being by Man o' War out of Baton . . . and is owned by Walter M. Jeffords.

Stocks Recover Firmer Tone on Short Covering; Treasury Issues Higher; Wheat Rises.

New York, April 15.—With a turnover of 1,500,000 shares the stock market found its balance and maintained a firmer tone from beginning to end. A few stocks recovered rather sharply, but the gains were indicative of thin markets rather than of confidence among traders, which also was largely true of the declines in recent trading. Bonds were steadier, with Treasury issues working higher. May wheat rose another 1⅛ cents to 98¼ cents a bushel.

Stocks had the benefit of some short covering, particularly in those issues that have slipped rapidly. Others were bid up under cover of the all around firmer tone. Rubber shares were strong and active. Goodyear, Goodrich and United States Rubber were among the most active stocks in the market and sold at new high prices. The electrics were buoyant. General Electric rose a point and Westinghouse on a good earnings report jumped 4 points. Airplanes also recovered. Stocks to move up 3 to 4 points were Douglas, Smith and Columbian Carbon.

Good rails climbed a point or so, although Pennsylvania was an exception. Steels were mixed. Steel common scrambled above 70, but it attracted no great following at that price. Motors for the most part made fractional gains. Chemicals were strong.

In the list of industrial favorites to rise 1 to 5 points were American Crystal Sugar, E. G. Budd, Case (up 5 points to a new high price), Clark Equipment, Collins & Aikman, Deere, Electric Power & Light (various classes), Industrial Rayon, T. W. A., Bendix and Philip Morris. On the shady side of the walk were American Safety Razor, American Smelting, Schulte common and preferred at new lows, Ingersoll-Rand and Houdaille Hershey B losing 1 to 3 points

Franc's Future.

Political news from Europe diminishes in immediate importance to the securities markets, which refuse to take seriously the early likelihood of a clash between Great Britain and Italy, nor to consider a German war an early probability. Foreign exchanges were again dull, with a shade less strength in the franc, the position of which is nevertheless regarded as better than it was recently. Devaluation of the franc, repugnant as it is to all shades of political organization in France, may came after election; but on the other hand some prophets now venture to say they don't believe it ever will happen.

The most confident assertions that the franc will be taken off gold are now being made in the London financial press, where the subject has become an obsession. By failing to devalue the franc, and temporarily to abandon the gold standard, France apparently will win the undying animosity of British financial writers.

Freight Traffic Up.

The day's news contributed nothing of great importance to aid the market in plotting its course. First quarter earnings statements are showing improvement over a year ago, for major companies, although a number of smaller organizations have felt the pressure of rising costs and taxes. While the reports are appearing the market is inclined to take fresh inventory of its position.

Current statistics continue favorable. Railroad freight-car loadings for last week, as computed from reports of principal carriers, were more than 7 per cent higher than a year ago and increased beyond the loadings of the previous week. Production of electricity holds its lead over last year and last week the gain was sharper than usual. Meanwhile, the Iron Age finds indications of sustained steel demand for "at least another month."

Inflation Hedges.

In an address yesterday, Orrin G. Wood, president of the Investment Bankers Association, said he could find "no real hedge against inflation." The same idea is expressed by Leonard P. Ayres, the noted analyst of the Cleveland Trust Co., who says it in figures. Col. Ayres has worked out a chart to show stock prices in terms of cost of living, covering the war and post-war inflation periods in France, Germany and the United States. The charting is done by the method of dividing the index for stock prices by the cost of living index. "If both had risen or declined about equally during the inflation period," concludes Col. Ayres, "the line on the chart would have continued to fluctuate about the 100 level. What actually happened was that the stock prices did not advance nearly so rapidly as the cost of living, so the line in the diagram declines to around 50 in 1920 and 1921. Clearly the purchase of stocks did not afford a good hedge against price inflation in this country at that time." The same was true of the other countries.

Nox? Nix!

The president of the Santa Fe today spiked the rumor of possible acquisition of Gulf Coast Lines, which was germinated by the market movement of the stock. "We have given no consideration to the matter," Mr. Bledsoe said. Other roads that, according to the map, might be interested are Kansas City Southern, Illinois Central or Missouri-Kansas-Texas, but the whole idea of a divorce of the line from the Missouri Pacific system is too fantastic to consider in appraising the Gulf Coast stock. This is evident in the market for Missouri Pacific secured 5¼ per cent bonds, quoted around 13. They have Gulf Coast stock as collateral, par for par.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

Some random Federal shorts:

Welfare Association of Procurement Division, Treasury, will be host tonight at a benefit dance at the Washington Hotel, under general chairmanship of Morris Weingarten (C).

BAKER.

Floridians in Government service are especially invited to attend the Florida State Society reception and dance Saturday night at the Washington Hotel, it is announced by Dan P. Mularkey (P), Reconstruction Finance Corporation, society secretary.

Roscoe F. Good (F), Navy, introduces an invention said to be of great military and commercial value. It is a frame for internal combustion engines, the frame being of low weight, low cost, but of inherent rigidity.

Georgians in Government service are invited to attend the reception and formal ball to be given by the Georgia State Society Saturday night at the Shoreham Hotel, in honor of the officers and delegates attending the D. A. R. Congress.

Interstate Commerce Commission employes are looking forward to a "variety" program in the Government auditorium April 27.

William Shipley, Home Owners Loan Corporation, is reported to have resigned to accept a position with Sears, Roebuck & Co., in Chicago.

A capacity crowd is expected to attend the preconvention dance of the Young Democratic Clubs of America tonight at the Mayflower Hotel, according to Allston Calhoun, Federal Housing Administration.

An Easter frolic will be held by In-Com-Co Club in the Interstate Commerce Commission cafeteria tomorrow from 8:20 to 11:30 p. m. Members may bring guests, according to L. H. Macomber (F), In-Com-Co president.

Retirement Age Limit.

"We are not going to have any optional retirement without an age limit," declares Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee. "Personally, I am not going to support it."

The Georgia Representative reiterates his friendship for Government employes and says he will go just as far with them as he can. But he does not "think it is in the interest of the general welfare of the people who work for this Government to permit the retirement of any person until they reach at least 58 or 60."

"I had a case in my district two years ago under the economy act," he recounts, "where the Postoffice Department wanted to retire a rural mail carrier, 48 years of age, living in a community of 1,500 people. If that had happened and it would have happened if I had not protested it, every man and woman in that community would have been cussing the Federal employes and the Federal Government because they would have thought he was drawing a pension of $100 a month from the Federal Government after having been retired in the prime of life.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F. P or C appears after your name call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F. Loew's Fox (stage, Everett Marshall and Patricia Bowman and other acts; screen, Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello Barrymore in "Little Lord Fauntleroy"); or to P. National Academy Meeting.

The program of the annual meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, to be held at the academy's headquarters here April 27 and 28 will include, among the 48 papers so far scheduled, two by Government scientists. They are:

"Equilibrium Between Excitation and Ionization in a High-Pressure Discharge," by Dr. Fred L. Mohler, Bureau of Standards.

"Preliminary Study of Temperature Effects of Short Solar Fluctuations," by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

Both talks will be illustrated.

Long-Range Forecasting.

Q. Is the Government now making any special studies of long-range weather forecasting?

NATHAN I. GOLDMAN (P).

A. According to a recent announcement from the Department of Agriculture, the scientific soundness of various methods of making long-range weather forecasts is being studied by the Weather Bureau with funds allocated from the Bankhead-Jones appropriation for stimulating basic research affecting agriculture. The Weather Bureau also, under a small WPA project, is investigating weather changes in certain regions in the United States and in other countries to discover, if possible, any fixed relationships between conditions at any two or more places.

Other institutions, both public and private, are investigating ocean temperatures, terrestrial magnetic phenomena, solar activity, lunar phenomena and planetary movements as they may affect weather. All these studies, as well as the attempts at long-range forecasting in foreign countries, are to be covered in the general survey now under way.

From a second survey—on the relationship of weather to crop yields as revealed by studies already made by the Weather Bureau, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and various State institutions—the department expects to develop more intensive research into crop yield variations and weather factors.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Dawn Patrol.

Passing of Howard Thurston removes from the scene the performer who played undoubtedly to the greatest number of children in stage history . . . When William Morris sr. booked him in vaudeville 30 years ago, his salary was $75 a week . . . Twenty years later, Thurston was earning from $16,000 to $20,000 per week . . . Even in his last few years, he was rated a $6,000-a-week attraction . . . It was his boast that no theater ever lost money on him, and on infrequent occasions when it appeared the theater would lose money, Thurston would stay an extra day and play for nothing . . . Millions of children have seen the slight scholarly-looking magician scale a card from the stage to the top pier of the balcony, or float a girl's body to the footlights and back again, apparently suspended in air . . . But Death exceeded Houdini, and now Thurston, for Death has made the last of the great magicians disappear, and the stage is poorer for their passing.

THURSTON.

It actually happened at El Morocco two nights ago . . . A titled European lady asked that a pretty American girl be brought to the table . . . "I understand, my dear," said the titled lady, calmly, "that before my husband sailed for Europe, you and he were having quite a desperate flirtation" . . . The pretty American girl now was a deep red . . . "Don't misunderstand me, my child," purred the titled lady . . . "I am not going to enact the role of the offended wife. I just wanted to warn you about him. He's a natural flirt, has been for years in Rome, Berlin, London, Paris. But he is very cheap with the girls he infatuates. Did he, by any chance, send you a dozen red roses every day?" . . . The American girl nodded, speechless . . . "I knew it," said the titled lady, "and you are much too pretty for that sort of treatment. Tomorrow, I'll have the jeweler send you something more worthy of your beauty" . . . The next day, the American girl, well known on Broadway, received a gorgeous diamond clip, and if she had been hit a clip on the chin, she would not have been more amazed . . . Though her amazement would not equal yours, if I could divulge the names.

* * * *

Not since the days of Jack Donahue had the town seen a hoofer to compare with him—until the arrival on the scene of Ray Bolger, in the Dwight Wiman opera, "On Your Toes" . . . Curiously enough, Bolger lived next door to the house in Boston which produced Donahue, so the one block of Boston pavement ment must be considered to possess magical springs or wells of dancing talent . . . Until this current success, Bolger had never secured a part that permitted a blending of his own particular type of comedy and dancing . . . But in this, he's given the sweep of the show and spurts into the star class . . . His treatment of "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," when he learns that gunmen are sitting in an upper box with directions to shoot him, under cover of applause, the minute he stops dancing, is different than, yet equal to the great Jack Donahue at his best . . . Broadway will not soon forget the scene: the harassed Bolger, exhausted by his marathon dance, imploring the puzzled orchestra to keep playing, to cheat the gunmen who will fill him with lead the minute he stops . . . I've rarely heard such huge howls in the theater.

* * * *

You wonder where the replacements of the theater will come from, at times . . . You wonder where a substitute will be found for a Sophie Tucker or a Belle Baker, and then an Ethel Merman flashes across the horizon and supplies the answer . . . You are mourning the passing of a Donahue and the loss of a Fred Astaire, and overnight, a Ray Bolger graduates from the ranks of the very good to vault into stardom . . . Actually, their rise to the top is slow and deliberate, but they spring into the starring class with a suddenness that takes your breath . . . It takes longer apparently to develop a comedian . . . In the past seven or eight years, the only comedians who have come up are Bert Lahr and Milton Berle, and there was a long wait between Lahr and Berle . . . The latter has great comedy possibilities, but lacks yet the sense of good taste which every great stage comic must develop, if it is not part of his natural equipment . . . When he clicks fully, he'll be terrific.

* * * *

Gae Foster, I think, is the most inventive of the ballet mistresses . . . The bicycle drill number which the Gae Foster eyefuls perform this week at the Roxy is an Easter highlight . . . The girls devoted three weeks to learning how to ride 'em . . . Roger Wolfe Kahn's secretary, pretty Mae Brin, weds Milt Karon in June . . . A doctor's wife will name a leading dancer in her divorce suit . . . Youngster who won a national radio contest by the simple expedient of copying word for word an article written by Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark . . . Has a world of company along Tin Pan Alley . . . Sigmund Spaeth can trace most of the popular songs of the day to Beethoven and Bach . . . Every magazine has trouble with plagiarists, for so much has been written that it is impossible to know which is original and which is copied . . . Dr. Kingdon should feel flattered . . . Imagine his feelings if, in a schoolboy contest, his article hadn't won first place? . . . Did Marie (Earl Carroll) Marks and Cecil Sillman elope to Harrison? . . . Mayor Ellenstein's annual benefit for the Hebrew orphans will be held April 19 at the Newark Mosque Theater . . . Willie and Eugene Howard go into the Versailles tomorrow.

Culbertson on Bridge

Percentage.

If a mad millionaire were to offer to toss a quarter with you, laying you odds of 2 to 1 that you couldn't guess whether it would drop heads or tails, you would cancel all engagements in order to spend a pleasant evening with him, wouldn't you? (Assuming, of course, that you had carefully examined the coin and found it honest!) Well, bridge players are offered those odds time and again on even money propositions, and still they lose! The fault is not with the game, it's honest enough. It lies with the players themselves, who are not shrewd enough to take advantage of percentage in their own favor. Let me illustrate this point with an actual hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

[1] hearts, having been agreed on, this is an asking bid.

[4] Shows second-round spade control.

[5] A repeated asking bid, for third-round club control.

[6] Cannot confirm third round club control; signs off.

[7] Repeated asking bid for third round spade control.

[9] This bid is distinctly gambling. South knows he will have to guess the club finesse but, being that type of player, decides to risk it. A bid of six would be correct.

The play should be so managed as to make the guess concerning the club queen a 5 to 2 chance in favor of the declarer. On an opening spade lead by West dummy's king should be played, followed by the ace of diamonds and a diamond ruff. Two rounds of trumps ending in the dummy account for the adverse trumps. A third diamond must be ruffed and then the spade ace led and the small spade ruffed in dummy. On this trick it must be noted that East fails to follow suit, marking him for only two spades. The last diamond is led and ruffed, and when both East and West follow suit their hands can be perfectly "counted out." East has shown that he held exactly two spades, two hearts and four diamonds. He must, therefore, have started with five clubs, which leaves only two for West. The percentage in playing East for the club queen, rather than West, is enormous, reducing the so-called guess to an odds-on chance.

House Rejects Funds to Fight Lobbying Suits

first test vote indicated that supporters of the Black Committee had a slight majority. The vote was on adoption of a rule to bring the resolution before the House. It was 147 in favor of the rule and 139 against.

Members on both sides repeatedly applauded the speakers. The final vote did not follow party lines.

The Black Committee, pursuing its new policy of ignoring lobbying and investigating anti-New Deal political organizations, called before it at the opening of its hearing John Henry Kirby, of Houston, Tex. head of the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution.

Kirby testified that he had obtained a $5,000 appropriation from Raskob to help finance the "grass roots" convention. Because Kirby did not have a complete list of contributors, Muse was called to the stand and Kirby was not recalled. Muse, tall and broad, with a deep scar on his right cheek, proved a belligerent witness.

Insists on Standing.

He started by insisting on standing while testifying, because he said he thought he should stand "in the presence of the United States Senate."

"Didn't I used to know you in Fort Worth?" asked Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, a member of the committee.

"We used to pull salt trucks in Swift's packing house together," Muse said. "I saw Sherman in Florida during the boom. He said it was going to bust six months before it did and that he was going to Indiana and become either Senator or Governor."

As the audience laughed, Minton remarked:

"Well, I'm a man of my word."

Muse told the committee he was formerly associated with the Texas Tax League, "a group of people who are trying to prevent what's happening here coming into Texas."

Chairman Black protested against Muse's lengthy comments.

"All we want is the truth," the Senator told him.

"I never lied in my life, not even to my wife," said Muse.

"We expect to treat you with courtesy," said Black.

"That would be an innovation here," the witness replied.

"It may be that you want to go before the Senate," Black snapped, referring to possible contempt charges.

"That would be an honor," said Muse.

Muse said that he, Kirby—to whom he referred as "this lovely old gentleman"—and Austin Callan, a Texas publicity man, had organized the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution in July, 1935.

"We had been plotting it two years before it was organized," he added.

Black handed Muse a letterhead of the committee on which was printed numerous names and asked if they were names of officers of the organization.

Almost Complete List.

"This is almost a complete list," the witness replied. "Some of them got Government contracts and resigned."

Black challenged him to name one of the group who had received a Government contract. Muse said he couldn't remember.

The chairman then asked for a list of contributors to the organization.

"Is it very long?" he asked.

"No. That's one of its faults," the witness replied. "There is only $40,000 there, where there should be $400,000,000."

Black then demanded to know whether Muse was connected with an organization called the Order of American Patriots. The witness replied that he declined to discuss his fraternal connections. After considerable bickering Muse admitted he was an officer of the organization, which he said had lodge rooms directly across the hall from the Southern committee's offices in Houston.

"Do you know who is head of the Order of American Patriots?" Black asked.

I swore on a flag and a Bible not to discuss the affairs of the organization and I won't do it," Muse replied.

Black then asked if Muse had caused political literature to be printed for the order and Muse refused to answer.

"Have you caused to be printed pamphlets about the President and his family intended to have an effect on the election?" Black persisted. Muse finally admitted he had. Black asked him to describe the literature. Muse said it "nauseated" him to do it, but that it contained "a picture of Mrs. Roosevelt going to a Negro meeting with two Negro escorts."

"You forced me to tell you that," Muse said.

"Nobody forced you to print and distribute those circulars," Black said.

"My conscience forced me to do it," Muse replied, dramatically placing both hands over his heart.

He said the literature had been circulated largely through the Election Managers Association, with offices adjoining those of the Southern committee. He said the Georgia Woman's World, a publication, had been rsponsible for distribution of the literature at Macon, but admitted some had been shipped to him there.

Muse then told of calling upon Raskob and du Pont. Raskob, he said, gave him a check for $5,000, and then put him in touch with Du Pont. The latter gave him a check for $3,000, he said, and later mailed him an additional $2,000. This money, he said, was spent entirely on the Macon meeting and that it had been solicited for that purpose. He said he wasn't sure whether Gov. Talmadge knew the source of the money.

Black demanded to know whether there was any complaint from the two financiers over the conduct of the Macon meeting, and Muse said he had not heard from them.

Circulation of Literature.

In answer to a question, Muse said Raskob and du Pont knew nothing about the literature that was circulated at the meeting.

Kirby told the committee that he had disclaimed any responsibility for the attacks on Mrs. Roosevelt.

Reading over the list of contributors to the general work of the operation, committee members revealed they included Henry du Pont, $500; Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, $1,000; Lammott du Pont, and $2,500; John W. Prentice, of Hornblower and Weeks, New York brokers, $500.

Among the smaller contributors was Senator Metcalf (Repulbican), of Connecticut, who donated $50 Also was included the name of Howard C. Hopson, utility magnate, who was once a prominent witness before the Lobby Committee.

Muse said the cost of raising the money was about 17 per cent of the total and that much of it was collected by employes who traveled about the country interviewing prospects. Few of the contributions, the list indicated, came from the South.

Senator Minton last night, in a radio talk, said that the effort of the committee to get telegrams of Silas H. Strawn, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, was intended to show how the Chicago bank of former President Charles G. Dowes obtained its $90,000,000 loan from the RFC.

Strawn obtained an injunction here to prevent the Western Union Co. from giving the committee his telegrams.

"The lobby committee wanted to see Mr. Strawn's telegrams to see what his activities, if any, were with reference to influencing the RFC to loan the Dawes Bank in Chicago $90,000,000 before the New Deal came into existence, and what, if anything Mr. Strawn had to do in attempting to influence the actions of public officials in Washington with reference to this loan," Minton said.

"In due time we expect to get around to these telegrams and find out what, if anything, the hand of Silas Strawn was doing in Washington while his law firm battled in Chicago to make the little stockholders of the defunct Dawes Bank pay the debt saddled on this bank, while the stockholders got out from under by the organization of another bank."

'Top Boys' Face Townsend Plan Coast Expose

'Sensational Break' Promised in Inquiry; Leader Jeers.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 15.—Representative Joseph Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, predicted today that within a week "there will be a sensational break that will involve the top boys" of the Townsend pension plan national organization.

He told of receiving about 50 threatening letters and phone calls since he arrived here last week-end as a Congressional sub-committeeman investigating the organization.

Gavagan and Representative Samuel Collins (Republican), of California, returned today from a secret 24-hour mission somewhere "north of Los Angeles."

Plan Leader Jeers.

While they were gone, Frank Arbuckle, Townsend director for the West, charged "they know their 'hot trail' is a false one."

"They're just scandal snoopers," he jeered.

Arbuckle declared the investigators are listening to alienated members of the organization and avoiding the "real Townsendites."

The sub-committee has been working with much secrecy, but Gavagan granted an interview after his return today. Collins, a friend of the Townsend movement, was present.

"There are thousands here who honestly believe in the sincerity and integrity of their Townsend leaders," Gavagan said. "We want to assure them that this committee will not do a single thing or bring to light a single act unless it is substantiated by legal documentary proof.

"We understand threats have been made, but these are falling on cold stones, so far as this committee is concerned."

Threat Caller Squelched.

In his remarks about threatening letters and phone calls, Gavagan said:

"A little while ago a fellow called me up and said he knew something of my background. He said I was on a spot and that I'd better get out of town as fast as I could. So I said to him 'I'll meet you downstairs or you can come up here and we'll settle it.' He hung up."

For the first time the committeemen announced the name of a witness questioned in the West Coast inquiry. They said he was C. J. MacDonald, of Long Beach, publisher of the first Townsend newspaper in the infancy of the movement. MacDonald later split with Dr. F. E. Townsend, creator of the pension plan, and Robert E. Clements, recently resigned national secretary.

The "hot trail" to which Arbuckle referred was mentioned yesterday by Gavagan, after he and Collins returned from a mysterious trip. Collins, however, disclaimed knowledge of any developments warranting public hearings. He said there had been no "real developments."

"I know the trail they're on, but it's going to lead nowhere," said Arbuckle.
